Smith Drops Cotton Plan For Parity on 5 Products

Will Offer Scheme To Head Off Farm Drive and Roosevelt's Subsidy

By Robert C. Albright.

In a move that caught farm colleagues off guard, Chairman Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, yesterday abandoned his direct cotton subsidy plan and proposed $275,000,000 for parity price payments on five farm commodities as a substitute.

Designed to meet Western opposition to separate treatment of cotton and to head off support for the Administration's export subsidy plan, the Smith substitute authorizes increased parity payments on corn, cotton, wheat, rice and tobacco.

Jockeying between Western and Southern blocs for farm plan advantage was resumed immediately in a series of conferences, while Secretary of Agriculture Wallace moved between the two groups with a third plan embracing both parity payments and domestic and export subsidies.

Biggest Share for Cotton

The original Smith cotton subsidy bill meanwhile was slated for Senate consideration tomorrow. The South Carolina Senator plans at that time to offer the $275,000,000 parity price plan as a complete substitute for his old measure, which would have paid cotton farmers up to 5 cents a pound in return for an agreement not to seek loans.

The new Smith parity plan would allot cotton farmers an estimated $110,000,000 as their share of the $275,000,000. Corn farmers would receive an estimated $85,251,000; wheat farmers $71,500,000, rice farmers $4,120,000, and tobacco growers $2,750,000. Parity payments, based on 1909-1914 farm purchasing power, would be made only to farmers cooperating in AAA soil conservation plans who agreed not to seek Government loans.

The maneuver anticipated an effort in the Senate Appropriations Committee tomorrow to add parity price payments to the Agriculture appropriation bill, along with a proposed sharp increase in funds available to the Administration to promote domestic and foreign outlets for surplus produce.

Wallace Now for Parity

Without formal Administration support, a committee move to appropriate $250,000,000 for farm parity payments had failed in the House.

But, since the President's espousal of subsidized export of Government loan cotton, opposed by Smith's Senate cotton bloc, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is reported at least tacitly espousing $175,000,000 in parity payments, plus another $125,000,000 for surplus products disposal.

Added to the $90,000,000 already available from customs receipts for surplus marketing, the $125,000,000 direct outlay would raise the total that could be used for domestic and export subsidies to $215,000,000. Subsidized cotton and wheat exports could be financed from the fund and Western support has been solicited on the promise of added assistance to dairy, pork and poultry products and other surplus commodities.

Smith Upsets Negotiations

Negotiations between Western and Southern farm blocs were proceeding on this plan when Smith unexpectedly proposed his $275,000,000 parity substitute. The Western bloc, which was set to oppose Smith's original cotton subsidy bill, will be called into conference today.

It is expected to attempt to defeat the new bill in the Senate tomorrow, in the hope of obtaining adoption of the combination parity price-surplus subsidy plan in which Wallace is interested. Cotton bloc colleagues of Senator Smith, called into hasty conference, predominantly agreed to support the Smith substitute.

Unqualifiedly backing the Smith proposal, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, viewed the rival plan as an attempt to win backing for the Administration's cotton export subsidy proposal. If the Smith bill is defeated, he said, he will move to call up his resolution placing the Senate on record against export subsidies.

George said that, in his opinion, export subsidies for wheat, if extended to cotton, and possibly later

Jack Benny Is Fined $10,000 in Smuggling

Comedian Also Given Suspended Term Of Year and a Day

By International News Service.

New York, April 4.—Before the smallest and certainly the most sober-faced audience of his career, Jack Benny, screen and radio comedian, today was given a suspended penitentiary sentence of a year and a day, fined $10,000, and severely reprimanded for the part he played in a jewelry-smuggling conspiracy.

His face set in deep lines of regret, the man whose humor has convulsed millions pleaded guilty on all three counts of the Government's indictment and, after a long lecture from Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell, heard his fate. His probation period of one year was transferred to the jurisdiction of the California courts.

It was a stiffer sentence than was imposed on George Burns, another film comedian who also conspired with Albert N. Chaperau, international confidence man, to bring jewelry into the United States without duty.

Burns pleaded guilty last January and was fined $8,000 and given a suspended sentence of a year and a day. Chaperau will be sentenced next week, as will Mrs. Elma Lauer, wife of a New York Supreme Court justice. Mrs. Lauer has pleaded guilty to a similar charge. She is a second offender.

Benny protested his innocence from the moment his name first came into the case until today when, upon the advice of his lawyers, headed by Carl Newton, he agreed to plead guilty. The decision obviated the need of a trial, at which Burns, Gracie Allen and Kenny Baker, who appears on Benny's radio program, were scheduled to testify against him.

JACK BENNY

In a mimeographed statement, Benny stated he would have pleaded guilty earlier but had been busy with completing his latest moving picture.

Mayor Kelly Of Chicago Re-elected

Green, Young G. O. P., Polls 637,107 of 1,400,000 Ballots

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 4.—Mayor Edward J. Kelly, leader of the city's powerful Democratic organization, won re-election tonight by defeating Dwight H. Green, aggressive young Republican, who based his campaign on a promise to "redeem Chicago from machine rule" and a pledge of strict economy.

Complete returns from 3,648 precincts gave Kelly 820,517 and Green 637,107.

Green compiled the largest total obtained by any Republican candidate here in 10 years.

Edward F. Moore, chairman of the Cook County (Chicago) Republican Committee, stated the "huge Republican vote definitely insures a Republican victory in Illinois in 1940 and dooms the New Deal nationally."

Kelly's total smashed the record for a Chicago mayoral candidate—the 790,060 he polled in the 1935 election—but his winning margin tonight fell far under the all-time high majority of 631,954 he enjoyed then.

Strategists on both sides of the political fence agreed the results would have an important bearing on the 1940 plans of the major parties.

Kelly, a veteran of 62, had the support of an organization rated as the strongest in the city's history by observers.

Green, 42, and making his first race for elective office, was drafted

Senate Confirms Douglas, 62 to 4, For High Court

The Senate confirmed William O. Douglas yesterday as an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

The vote was 62 to 4. Opposing were Senators Frazier and Nye, of North Dakota; Lodge, of Massachusetts, and Reed, of Kansas, all Republicans.

Douglas, 40, now chairman of the Securities Commission, is expected to take his seat when the court reconvenes April 17.

Slapped Boss, Got No Raise, Girl Tells Quiz

SEC Worker Asserts Incident Was Beside The Point in Her Case

A Veterans' Administration attorney who believes that a Federal employe "cut his throat" when he complains about his supervisor, and an SEC feminine employe who did not deny having once slapped her supervisor's face, laid stories of discrimination before Senator Ellender's special committee investigating Government czarism yesterday.

"We will just have a little family affair here now," said Ellender, arranging on the right at his table several feminine employes who had done well in promotions and on his left a bevy who, he said, had failed to rise in relationship to their talents. In front, he placed Francis P. Brassor, SEC personnel chief, to explain promotions of the group on Ellender's right and failure of the group on the left to rise.

Lost Job to a Woman

It was shortly after Flora Faulkner, an SEC stenographer, had related how she entered the agency in 1934 at $1,620 and now makes $1,680 that Brassor said she once had slapped her supervisor and once had refused an increase, "That is beside the point," replied Miss Faulkner. She added that even before such an incident she had not been advanced.

And when the SEC hearing was completed, Raymond J. Abbaticchio, Veterans' Administration attorney, told a lengthy story of being shifted about so that his work showed to disadvantage; of being transferred once so a woman could take his job and of his views on employe appeals.

$1,440 to $2,400 Rise Told

"In my experience, an employe who makes a complaint to his superior is cutting his throat. What we should have," he said, "is an independent body of appeals."

Previously, Ellender had flailed away at Brassor about promotions. The SEC official complained that some of Ellender's assumptions were not consistent with his questions. Ellender replied, "I will show you in a few minutes through some ex-

Stinson Judge Expels Girls; Nurse Tells More of Romance

In a dramatic evening session during which Justice Luhring cleared the court of "young girls" and recessed twice for the witness to rest, Miss Jessica Shoemaker, nurse-companion to Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson, last night continued her account of the romance between Mrs. Crounse and Joseph Whitla Stinson.

Miss Shoemaker, who is accused of keeping the wealthy widow drugged through her wedding to the former Justice Department lawyer, has been on the stand since the bizarre annulment case entered its fourth week on Monday morning. She will resume her testimony at 10 a. m. today.

She was well into her discussion of a green dress purchased for her by Stinson, but never delivered, when Justice Luhring stopped her to exclaim: "What is that young girl doing in here? She's just a child and shouldn't be hearing all this."

"Some might think it all right," he said, "but I'm not putting on a show." After two teen-age girls had left the room, he turned to a bench filled with legal stenographers and asked: "Are you sure you're Sumners Acts to Give Vote to D. C.

Broader Municipal Powers, National Representation Called For in Resolution

Prospects that voteless Washingtonians may be given the vote and national representation were improved unexpectedly yesterday when Chairman Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, introduced a resolution providing for a constitutional amendment.

The proposal, which may supplant the long-pending Norton and Randolph resolutions, is unique in that it authorizes suffrage and broader municipal powers for the District, and at the same time provides for their repeal.

Effect of the Sumners resolution would be to permit Congress to grant District residents suffrage privileges and to delegate any or all of its powers over the local government, with the proviso that Congress could withdraw or modify the powers any time it saw fit.

Authority to Grant Suffrage

The Sumners resolution, if ratified, would remove all legal doubts as to the power of Congress to delegate its authority over the District to either an appointive or elective agency, such as it proposed in the Griffenhagen report.

The Constitution gives Congress "exclusive" legislative control of the Capital, and some members have questioned the authority of Congress to surrender any of this power to a city council or similar legal agency.

While local suffrage is not specified in the resolution, it could be granted under the delegation of powers. Chairman Sumners explained, however, that he has no doubt that Congress already has the authority to grant District residents local suffrage.

Enabling Provision

Sumners did not indicate whether the resolution will be pressed at this session of Congress or not. It has not been taken up by the committee, he said.

"My resolution is an enabling provision which permits Congress to grant full governmental opportunities to the District and to modify or repeal the authorization if it doesn't work," he said.

After the customary preamble providing for amendment to the Constitution by ratification by at least three-fourths of the States, the resolution reads:

"Section 1. The Congress shall have the power to provide for the people of the District, constituting the seat of the Government of the United States, representation in the Congress and among the electors of the President and Vice President no greater than that of the people of the States, and to delegate to such government as Congress shall establish all or any of its power over said District; and the judicial power of the United States shall extend to controversies to which citizens of said District shall be parties the same as to controversies to which citizens of the States shall be parties."

"Section 2. All legislation hereunder shall be subject to amendment and repeal, providing that no amendment or repeal shall affect the office of a Senator or Representative during the time for which he was elected."

Unlike the Norton resolution, the Sumners measure does not provide

Hopkins to Move To Iowa; Denies Political Motive

Warm Springs, Ga., April 4 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Hopkins said here tonight he would go to Iowa in a few weeks to establish a permanent residence at his boyhood home at Grinnell.

Political observers saw in the move a possibility that Hopkins may be changing his voting residence from New York to the West to run for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency or the Senate in 1940.

But Hopkins insisted there was "no political motive" in it at all. He said he wanted to provide a permanent home and "close circle of friends" for his young daughter, Diana, where he spent his boyhood days. He also denied a recent report that he intended to resign from the Cabinet because of ill-health.

4 Nazi 'Nests' Raided by Police Of Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, April 4.—The investigations chief of the Buenos Aires police announced tonight he had raided four "nests of Nazi infiltration" in the Argentine capital, "beginning with the Nazi Party headquarters."

The raids were conducted on the fourth day of an investigation of charges that the German government had received a report from a German Embassy adviser describing Patagonia, southern Argentina territory, as a "no man's land" to which Argentina had "no right."

Berlin, April 4 (AP).—Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter today charged that Washington was behind "awkward falsifications" published by Argentine newspapers concerning German designs on Patagonia.

Poland Agrees To Sign Mutual Defense Pact With Britain

Special Cable to The Post.

London, April 4.—Poland's readiness to defend vital British interests under certain conditions, in return for Britain's guarantee of Polish independence, was formally conveyed to the British government today by Poland's foreign Minister Beck, as he began three days of bargaining with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax.

The transformation of Britain's pledge to Poland into a mutual defense pact, which would be the starting point for an anti-Hitler coalition of peace-loving powers, is far from complete but before Beck returns to Warsaw late this week, it is expected that the two countries will have drawn up a permanent treaty of mutual assistance.

Speed Aircraft Industry

Meanwhile, Britain and France concluded two days of official planning for the co-ordination and speeding up of aircraft production of both countries. Guy Lachambre, French air minister, conferred with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood today.

It is reported that as an outcome of Lachambre's brief visit that the Vickers Spitfire fighter, one of Britain's best war planes, may be manufactured under license in France. France is also expected to be granted licenses for the manufacture of the Rolls Royce Merlin, 1,650-horsepower engine, used in Spitfire.

Edsel Ford is reported to be taking part in the negotiations for the production of these engines by the French Ford Company.

Poland has much to say in determining the attitude of Rumania since the Polish-Rumanian treaty for mutual defense against any Russian aggression is one of the chief bulwarks of the foreign policy of both countries.

The entire issue was brought up by Beck in today's talks. He was understood to have suggested that Britain should try to bring Hungary into the "Halt Hitler" bloc instead of virtually abandoning her to Germany.

Seek New Rumanian Pact

Poland, diplomats said, might be willing to aid such a plan through her close friendship with Hungary, while at the same time tying up Rumania by extension of the Polish-Rumanian treaty to cover all aggression and not solely Russian.

Poland was represented as being adamant against joining any general anti-German alliance including Russia. If she did join such an alliance, diplomats said, she could no longer continue sitting on the fence between Berlin and Moscow.

Chamberlain, however, was understood to be pressing Beck to specify whether he would fight with Britain in any aggression against Belgium, The Netherlands or Switzerland.

Poland wanted assurance she would be excused from fighting if Britain and Italy became involved

Italy Shuts 'Back Door' On Encirclement

Moves to Strengthen Treaty With Albania, Guard the Adriatic

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 4.—Military and diplomatic moves to guard Italy's maritime back door were under way tonight and were explained by Fascists as a precaution against alleged French-British attempts to "encircle" Italy and Germany.

Italian interest centered on the Adriatic Sea and the eastern Mediterranean—of vital interest to Italy in time of trouble.

The Italian government radio station at Bari announced negotiations were being conducted to strengthen Albania's military alliance with Italy—a pact which already requires each country to place all its military, financial and other resources at the disposal of the other in case either ally is menaced with war.

The Albanian legation in London tonight issued an announcement that Albania "would never allow violation of her independence or integrity" on the heels of unconfirmed reports Italy was planning to send troops to occupy Albania.

The statement described as "having no foundation" reports that "a protectorate over Albania is imminent."

Zef Zereggi, Albanian minister to Italy, left for Tirana tonight. He was expected back tomorrow, when there may be definite decision on

Reports that Italy would move troops into Albania (shaded on map) within 48 hours, brought the announcement from the Albanian Legation in London that Albania "would never allow violation of her independence or integrity."

Army Awaits Money to Let Plane Contracts

Order for 565 Ships Ready for Signature; 3,500 to Be Bought

The Army is ready to let contracts for the "best types of aircraft in existence," Acting Secretary of War Johnson said yesterday in announcing completion of plans for all phases of the emergency defense program.

Factories will start producing the 3,500 new airplanes and other munitions provided in the $552,000,000 program within a few days, just as soon as funds become available, it was said. By anticipating passage of the Army expansion act, signed by the President Monday, Johnson said, contracts for 565 planes of five advanced types are now ready for signature.

President Roosevelt, officials indicated, will ask Congress for funds for the remaining 2,500 to 3,000 planes within a few days so that the entire program can be launched this spring. Plans call for the Army to have a maximum strength of 6,000 first line planes and an aircraft industry capable of turning out 1,000 a month within two years.

Mine Layer Allocated

Meanwhile, the naval phase of the armament program went forward.

The House sub-committee on naval appropriations will suspend hearings today on the $750,000,000 supply bill to enable members to get first-hand information as to new types of planes and ships. Chairman Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, will fly to the West Coast today with Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, to inspect experimental plane types at West Coast plants and visit the naval air base at San Diego. Other members of the group will visit Pensacola, and other naval activities. Hearings will be resumed late next week.

By Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski,
Former Premier and Chief of Staff.
By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post

Warsaw, April 4.—Poland, wedged between Greater Germany and Soviet Russia, is from the military standpoint, in a difficult and delicate situation.

But since a certain time things have grown considerably worse. The German occupation of Czecho-Slovakia secured for the Reich an indisputable strategical superiority in central and eastern Europe.

The possession of the Czechs' bastion consolidates materially and militarily the position of the Third Reich insofar as it provides it with a solid platform for other conquests and for the protection of its flanks and rear. Its frontier has been shortened by more than 300 miles.

By her possession of Slovakia, Germany believes she can exercise an effective pressure upon Hungary to which the latter might also be obliged to succumb.

The vicinity of the Third Reich is therefore becoming more and more menacing for Rumania, whose agriculture and oil constitute a tempting prey. The recent economic agreements between Ru-

Bund Visions German Fuehrer For America, F. B. I. Reports

Members of the German-American Bund and kindred organizations, gazing into the crystal ball of the future, imagine they see a German fuehrer at the helm of the United States Government, applying Nazi methods and doctrines in the administration of this country's affairs.

Literature distributed by the bund, a Federal Bureau of Investigation report revealed yesterday, points to the German population of the United States as a chosen people with a definite "mission" to perform. The object of the bund is to organize German-Americans and imbue them with the necessary ideals in order that their mission shall be fulfilled.

The report recalls that, at a German day celebration a few years ago in Madison Square Garden, New York, a speaker referred to "the day when one of our own race will sit at the head of the conference tables in Washington." An F. B. I. agent attended this celebration, in which bund leaders took a prominent part.

News of Stanhope's Speech Suppressed; Commons Inquiry May Be Ordered

By the Associated Press.

London, April 4.—A great furor was created in official circles tonight by the dramatic statement of Earl Stanhope, first lord of the admiralty, that antiaircraft guns of the British navy had been manned "so as to be ready for anything."

The declaration which Stanhope made at Portsmouth brought a quick denial from Prime Minister Chamberlain's residence that any such order had been issued and a request from the admiralty in London that the press suppress the speech.

Stanhope spoke aboard the aircraft carrier Royal Ark at Portsmouth during a naval function.

"Shortly before I left the admiralty, it became necessary to give orders to man antiaircraft guns of the fleet so as to be ready for anything that might happen," he said.

Officers Called to Duty

He said the absence of some officers from the function was due to the fact they had been called on duty.

An admiralty spokesman in London denied any antiaircraft order had been issued and said many officers were absent on Easter leave.

"The fleet is always ready and no extra precautions have been taken tonight," the spokesman said.

At least two morning papers in their midnight editions printed Stanhope's words, despite the admiralty's request that it be withheld.

The Daily Mail said "a request was made by an admiralty official that Lord Stanhope's statement should not be published," but since the news had been flashed to the world "suppression could not serve the public interest."

In a later edition, however, the Daily Mail withdrew the report of Lord Stanhope's speech with the following explanation:

"At the request of the admiralty, the Daily Mail refrains from publishing Lord Stanhope's actual statement in the national interest."

The News Chronicle, under the headline "Lord Stanhope's speech was suppressed last night," likewise reported it was refraining from publication at the admiralty's request.

Facing Commons Inquiry

Under the British official secrets act, the government has the power to suppress news which it considers against national safety and can invoke stiff penalties against those who fail to obey.

[Stanhope's revelation and the subsequent effort by the admiralty to prevent publication of his speech caused the question of Stanhope's future in the government to be raised, according to the United Press.

[It was understood in the lobby of the House of Commons that a question would be raised in Parliament tomorrow concerning the affair.

[The Central News, large British news agency, distributed this comment shortly before midnight:

["Stanhope's department indicated that in the national interest his words should be suppressed. There is no precedent for the suggestion that a speech made publicly by a cabinet minister should not be reported.

["Cabinet ministers are supposed to have a due sense of responsibility and it is assumed that what they think proper to say publicly may be conveyed without reproach to a wider audience than that which they address.

ARMY LEGEND: He was a beloved old sourpuss, a high ranking Army officer who was crusty, taciturn and seldom smiled. . . . He wasn't really mean; he just seemed to suffer, but made a great record. After his retirement the surgeons operated on his thigh, where there had been pressure on a nerve. . . .

Inside they found the vestiges of his unborn twin brother, which had become entangled in his embryo before he was born . . . One of five or six such cases in medical history. Beloved old sourpuss. He had worked his way to a general's stars despite it . . . What a soldier!

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Some of the President's advisers think there'd be no harm in putting his name in some of the 1940 preferential primaries. . . . Apparently Secretary Ickes was one man in Washington who had read Hitler's "Mein Kampf" and knew it wasn't safe to sell him any helium . . . If you want to get in good with Queen Elizabeth during her visit here, call her Lizzie; she likes it. Maybe you'll see her at a party or parade.

"—when Gene Cox slaps again"

If fiery-eyed, bristling, domineering Congressman Eugene Cox takes a notion to slap another WPA worker whose sass he doesn't like, he'd better look twice, because there's a plot afoot to send an athletic unemployed prize fighter to call on him next time, instead of a thin, underfed, timid WPA-ster like the last one Gene picked on. . . . Stun 'em with oratory, Gene.

Three years after publication of the first U. S. guide books by the WPA writers, the news has got through to Karl Baedeker, publisher of the famous Baedeker guidebooks. He has written from Leipzig, Germany, to Henry Alsberg of WPA asking for details.

Two French guidebook publishers have also written inquiring about translations . . .

Alsberg's WPA writers have completed some 130 American guides, and they make fascinating reading if you suffer from wanderlust or a gnawing curiosity, and like to know what you're looking at as you drive across the land. When I'm at the wheel the b. w. reads aloud from 'em.

Aviation experts have been taking a look at television, to see whether airplanes could use it in wartimes to transmit pictures of enemy positions down to the ground for the generals to take a look at 'em. . . .

Sarnoff of RCA has prophesied to the Army that the time will come when a general can sit at his headquarters and see the enemies' trenches sweep past his eyes in his television set, as an observation plane flies over them. . . .

But they are still a little skeptical; at present the pictures from a plane are hazy, lack detail and are hard to co-ordinate for position.

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING: Whenever Hitler marches into some hapless land, they raise the red and black Nazi flag above the old brick German Embassy here on Massachusetts avenue. It hangs listlessly on its staff, a dubious object, almost a tawdry thing, eloquent to a free people of lies, legalized robbery, fomented revolutions in peaceable neighboring countries, threats, Nazi bolshevism, bribery, espionage and seizures . . . A country's flag is what its temporary rulers make it.

Yesterday I saw a couple of platoons of high school military cadets drilling at the corner nearest the German Embassy, across Fourteenth street . . . The Nazi flag was conspicuous in the background behind them as they stood lined up . . . But for that flag in the landscape and what it stands for, their drilling would seem merely so much physical exercise . . .

I hope those lads aren't dragged into war some day by the swastika.

Relief Held Up To Avert Fight on Floor

Sub-Committee May Slash $100,000,000 Bill to $55,000,000

A quiet struggle to avoid an open breach on the floor of the Senate was being waged in Democratic ranks yesterday as efforts were under way to obtain general agreement on the $100,000,000 House emergency relief bill.

Confronted with the threat of the Appropriations subcommittee handling relief to slash the House measure to $55,000,000, the Senate leadership is understood to have abandoned any hope of obtaining the $150,000,000 demanded by the President.

The Appropriations subcommittee, heavily weighted against the New Deal, is ready to give its indorsement to $100,000,000, it was learned, only if assurances are received that no Administration attempt will be made to raise the figure to $150,000,000.

May Urge $55,000,000

The Post was informed last night that if such an understanding cannot be reached, the subcommittee is very likely to recommend a $55,000,000 bill, thus precipitating a bitter and probably lengthy fight on the Senate floor.

The sub-committee, which decided Monday by an 8-2 vote not to raise the House appropriation to $150,000,000, failed to hold a meeting yesterday to determine whether it will accept the House figure. It is expected that the bill will be reported out today or tomorrow.

Pointing out that if the Administration leadership insists on $150,000,000, the battle will be loud and long. One prominent New Dealer said yesterday that "we would rather have a certain $100,000,000 now than a possible $150,000,000 two or three weeks from now."

He added that the House leadership had declared there was no chance of a conference report urging $150,000,000 being accepted in the House. On the other hand, members of the House urban-liberal bloc early in the week expressed some hope of obtaining passage of a $150,000,000 bill if the lead is given by the Senate.

Pepper Stands Pat

Democratic efforts to insure a $100,000,000 sub-committee report and passage of the bill with a minimum of argument will be embarrassed by the frequently expressed intention of Senator Pepper, 100 per cent New Dealer, to stand pat for $150,000,000.

If the Appropriations Committee does the expected in reporting but a $100,000,000 bill, and Senator Pepper moves to increase it by 50 per cent, he will thereby be putting many New Deal Senators "on the spot." On the one hand they want to keep their relief voting record clean, and, on the other, they have no desire to tempt the militant economy bloc to reprisals. Furthermore they do not believe the $150,000,000 can win in the present temper of the Senate.

Meanwhile, Chairman Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee named the deficiencies sub-committee, which has always handled WPA appropriations, as the agency to carry on "a thorough investigation and study" of the WPA ordered last week by the House.

Taylor, 80 years old, is chairman of the sub-committee, but Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, will be acting chairman of the group.

Outsiders Will Help

The sub-committee, which will ask the House for a $25,000 preliminary appropriation today, is scheduled to met tomorrow to formulate plans for the inquiry. Assistance will be sought from the executive departments, and some outside investigators will also be employed.

WPA Dropped 30,000

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, announced yesterday that 2,976,140 persons were employed by WPA on March 29, a reduction of 30,117 from the previous week. He has stated that, in view of the House passage of the $100,000,000 relief bill, he intends to reduce WPA rolls to 2,800,000 by April 8. During the last week of March District rolls were reduced 143, to 13,008. Maryland dropped 309, to a total of 18,635, and Virginia dropped 384, to 30,900.

The Gallup Poll

Public Found Critical of Relief Policies As House Begins Investigation of WPA

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 4.—With the House of Representatives preparing to launch its investigation of the WPA in the next few weeks, American voters are critical of many parts of the present relief program, and the majority of them have definite ideas as to what should be done.

GEORGE GALLUP

During the past two years the American Institute of Public Opinion has sounded public sentiment on the relief issue in a number of cross-section surveys in which the views of nearly 70,000 people were collected. The results furnish a broad picture of the nature and trend of public thought on the question. Summarized below, these results indicate that a relief investigation such as the House of Representatives plans is undoubtedly welcomed by the public at this time.

1. ADMINISTRATION. There has been a rising trend of public sentiment for returning relief to the State and local governments. Whereas three years ago (April, 1936) a bare majority of 55 per cent of voters favored this step, a survey just completed by the Institute finds that 64 per cent now think relief should be administered by State and local governments rather than from Washington.

If relief is to remain in the hands of the Federal Government, however, a large majority of voters (76 per cent) feel that it would be better administered by a bipartisan board than by a single administrator as at present. This plan has been advocated by Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, and is favored by voters chiefly because they think it will help to eliminate political manipulation and graft.

2. POLITICS. A large majority of voters believe that politics colors the handling of relief. When asked how much it influences relief administration in their local communities, 53 per cent of voters said that it played a large part, 31 per cent a minor part, while only 16 per cent said it played no part at all.

The majority of voters favor drastic laws to guard against political control of relief. They believe, for example, that all relief officials should be put under civil service, that persons on relief or connected with relief administration should not be allowed to contribute money to a political campaign, that anyone who attempts to influence the vote of reliefers, either through coercion or promise of reward, should be punished by law.

The surveys also clearly show that taking politics out of relief is not an issue on which there is a partisan difference of opinion. The rank and file of both Democrats and Republicans favor the same measures to accomplish this end.

3. EXPENDITURES. The dominant pull of public opinion is toward decreasing, rather than increasing, the sums of money spent for relief. About two voters in five are satisfied with the present spending rate, but among the remaining voters sentiment for cutting relief appropriations is twice as great as sentiment for increasing those appropriations.

4. PERMANENCE. One of the purposes of the House resolution to investigate relief, introduced by Representative E. E. Cox, of Georgia, is to gather facts on which a long-time relief policy can be based.

While relief was only a temporary expedient in the early days of depression, Institute surveys show that the principle of Government aid to the needy unemployed is now a definite part of the Nation's social philosophy. Nearly 70 per cent of voters think that unemployment relief is, and should be, a Government responsibility, and about the same number think relief appropriations will have to continue indefinitely.

On the question whether aid to the unemployed shall continue in the form of work relief, or as direct cash relief, the public's choice is clear. Approximately 8 voters in every 10 (79 per cent) favor work relief as against the dole.

for the granting of State powers to the District and its residents.

The Norton resolution, moreover, stipulates that District residents shall be entitled to elect "one or two Senators as determined by the Congress or such representative in the Senate as Congress may provide for, representatives in the House according to their numbers as determined by the decennial enumeration, and Presidential electors equal in number to their aggregate representation in the House and Senate or as Congress may provide."

Sumners' resolution is an outgrowth of public hearings held by the Judiciary Committee last spring. It is the first indication from the committee or its chairman that they stood ready to recommend some measure of franchise for District residents.

Capitol observers believe it would have a better chance of being adopted by the House and Senate because of the simple formula for repeal or modification.

Sumners' resolution would make it unnecessary for Congress to submit the question of repeal or modification to the States as it did when prohibition proved a failure.

Many members of Congress have opposed national representation for the District on the grounds that once granted it could not be withdrawn without consent of the States. The Sumners' resolution would assure Congress of ultimate control of the District as stipulated in the Constitution.

Fish Calls U. S. 'Soft Neighbor'

By the Associated Press.

The House gave United States-Mexican relations a going-over yesterday, with Representative Fish (Republican), New York, speaking disparagingly of the "soft neighbor policy" in debating a measure to authorize an appropriation for this Government's expenses in settling claims against Mexico for expropriation of agrarian lands.

The House later passed the measure.

Fish said more than $5,000,000 in claims was at stake because "if we don't stop this confiscation, it means the end of American investments, not only in Mexico, but an end to our investments in Latin America."

Rail Head Favors ICC Extension

A spokesman for the Association of American Railroads gave qualified indorsement yesterday to legislation designated to apply uniform regulatory principles to all forms of transportation.

R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the association, described as "very constructive" a bill by Senators Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, and Truman (Democrat), Missouri, which would extend the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission to waterways and, for purposes of rate-making, to air lines.

Senate Votes Reciprocal Salary Taxes

Borah Protests Step Is Unwise but Wins Only Scattered 'Noes'

Over protest by Senator Borah that the step was "unwise," the Senate yesterday passed the Administration's reciprocal salary tax bill empowering States to tax incomes of Federal employes and permitting Federal taxation of State workers' pay.

Passage by the Senate followed prior approval by the House and a Supreme Court opinion ten days ago validating reciprocal tax action by State and Federal governments. The bill goes back to the House, which may approve Senate changes or send the bill to conference.

As passed by the Senate, the salary tax measure gives legislative force to the court ruling. Immunity from State taxes would be removed from 1,200,000 Federal employes and 2,500,000 State employes would lose Federal tax exemption. Actually, only $16,000,000 in revenue would be realized by the Treasury, as the pay of thousands of State employes falls below Federal income tax-exemption allowances.

Federal Judges Included

Floor amendments by the Senate immunized both Federal and State employes from assessment for back taxes under the law, and subjected Federal judges for the first time to both Federal and State taxation. One amendment "clarified" the bill to make certain Senators and Representatives, as well as other Federal officials, subject to reciprocal tax features.

Challenging the wisdom, but not the legality of the move, Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, clashed repeatedly with Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, chairman of the special Senate committee, which recommended the legislation.

Borah said Justice Stone's decision in the O'Keefe case last week left no doubt as to the validity of the action.

Sees Constant Bickering

"But I think it is unwise," Borah said. "The amount of money which we will get out of this bill will be practically nil. Yet we are placing the two sovereignties (State and Federal governments) in the position where they will be constantly bickering with one another with reference to taxes upon their officials.

"We are placing the two sovereignties in the position where they will not be recognized in their sovereign integrity, but as mere taxable entities of the Federal Government. That is not true and never has been true; that is not a reality and never has been a reality."

Borah said it would "furnish about enough taxes to pay the gasoline bills for a portion of the automobiles which skirt the town, which the Government pays for on social occasions."

Passed by Voice Vote

The Idahoan recalled Chief Justice Marshall's opinion in McCulloch vs. Maryland "that if the two sovereignties were to exist they must exist free from each other's interference or free from embarrassment, and therefore in the very nature of things while it was not written in the Constitution it must necessarily be true."

"That is just as true now," said Borah, "and in my opinion we ought to adhere to it even though the Supreme Court has in this particular instance undoubtedly given validity to legislation like the pending bill."

The bill passed by a voice vote, with Borah and a scattered following loudly shouting "no."

Judges Hit Two Ways

Explaining that the Supreme Court ruling left both Federal and State employes subject to retroactive taxation, Senator Brown obtained amendments to the bill to prevent reciprocal taxation of salaries paid before last January.

The bill now provides that if any State attempts to tax salaries of Federal employes, its own personnel will become subject to Federal taxation.

Brown also offered the amendment making Federal judges subject to the Federal income tax, denying that this was prohibited by the constitutional bar against diminution of Federal judges' income while in office. On motion of Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, the amendment was broadened to give States the power also to tax salaries of Federal judges.

Connally sponsored the amendment placing Senators and Representatives clearly within the bill's tax provisions. Connally said there still is some issue whether Senators and Representatives are Federal "officials," and he offered the amendment to make certain they would be subject to levies by the States.

The bill, approved by both houses, represents half of President Roosevelt's recommendation that exemptions be removed both from Federal and State salaries, and that income from Federal, State and local security issues also be subject to reciprocal taxation.

The bond tax feature was omitted by both the House and the Senate Finance Committee. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, threatened to offer it on the Senate floor, but abandoned the effort on receiving assurances that the House Ways and Means Committee will consider the bond tax proposal before the end of the session.

On Capitol Hill

Amid frequent outbursts, challenging propriety of his remarks, Secretary of Interior Ickes yesterday charged before the House Public Lands Committee that private power interests are trying to block the proposed John Muir - Kings Canyon National Park in California.

ICKES

Assailing previous witnesses and opponents of the park, Ickes characterized Charles Dunwoody, of the California State Chamber of Commerce, as a "lobbyist," and declared that inquiry would reveal a "tie-up of power" causing Dunwoody to oppose the park plan.

He likewise attacked the stand of W. G. Boone, chairman of the Kings River Water Users Association, who refused to approve the present park plans.

Representative Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, received a blood transfusion yesterday in Naval Hospital. Physicians said his condition had improved greatly since he entered the hospital about two weeks ago.

Congressional action was completed on a resolution authorizing the unveiling of a statue of Will Rogers, late Oklahoma cowboy-humorist, in the rotunda of the Capitol.

The House approved a Senate resolution authorizing the ceremonies. The Oklahoma Will Rogers Memorial Commission has set June 6 as the date for the unveiling. The statue will be moved later to Statuary Hall in the Capitol.

Tourists huddled in dark basement corridors and portly Senators were left without the use of elevators when the Capitol's power system failed briefly yesterday. Service was soon restored in most parts, but in some corridors the building staff resorted to old-fashioned lanterns.

Representative Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, is seeking the signatures of 218 members on a petition to force consideration in the House of a bill requiring Treasury officials to equalize domestic and foreign labor costs by levying excise taxes on imports.

Connery asserted that although the United States had established a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour, foreign products made with labor receiving as little as 5 cents an hour were being "dumped" on our markets.

The House Judiciary Committee unanimously reported the Hobbs bill calling for the detention of criminal aliens in Federal concentration camps until their governments issue passports for their return to their native lands.

Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, said that "much to my chagrin, we learned from Secretary of Labor Perkins that foreign countries dictate our deportation of aliens by refusing to grant visas or passports to aliens after the Secretary of Labor has issued a deportation warrant.

"As a result the four worst classes of aliens, criminals convicted of felonies, white slavers, narcotic smugglers, anarchists and Communists can remain free in our country by obtaining a habeas corpus writ from a Federal district judge."

The Senate Banking Committee approved a compromise measure regulating the issuance of securities under trust indentures.

The bill, introduced by Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, would bring operations under trust indentures within the scope of the Securities Commission, with specific standards fixed in the law.

The committee approved charges removing some of the arbitrary discretion which would have been given to the SEC under the original measure.

A flat exemption of issues of less than $1,000,000 was written into the bill and approved by the committee's action.

Women's Wage Hearing Today

The proposed wage will become effective within 60 days if there are no serious objections at today's hearing. It would affect more than 1,500 women and is based on standard workweeks of from 32 to 48 hours.

Altmeyer Urges Liberalization Of State Security Benefits

By The Associated Press.

Opposing reduction of the 3 per cent pay roll tax collected from employers for unemployment compensation, Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, proposed instead yesterday that the Government induce the States to liberalize their compensation systems.

Altmeyer expressed his views in response to questions by members of the House Ways and Means Committee as to whether the tax was not larger than necessary to support the State systems.

Congress is confronted with the problem of developing a long-range program to deal with unemployment, he said, and the unemployment compensation section of the security act is the only approach to such a program now on the statute books.

"If you intend to compensate the worker for even 50 per cent of the unemployment he suffers, it is obvious that we need the 3 per cent tax." Altmeyer contended. "There isn't a single State system that ought not be liberalized. Until and unless they are liberalized, we cannot expect the compensation laws to be of real help in solving the unemployment problem."

Under the present State systems, the witness said, benefits to the unemployed are at most 50 per cent of the weekly wage loss; the period over which such benefits are paid is limited strictly, usually to 13 or 14 weeks, and the unemployed must wait two to three weeks before any benefits are paid.

Questioned by Representative McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, as to what changes he favored in the Federal standards which the State systems are required to meet, Altmeyer promised to submit a detailed written statement later but made several suggestions offhand.

'Kiss of Death' Woman Sought In Poison Plot

Induced Lovers, Mates Into Buying Insurance, Then Killed Them

Philadelphia, April 4 (AP).—A dark-eyed woman who, detectives said, had a "kiss of death" was sought tonight as an arch conspirator in an insurance-murder plot.

One man has been convicted of first-degree murder as a principal.

Detective Samuel Riccardi, chief investigator of numerous deaths ascribed to a ring operating in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, outlined the unnamed suspect's methods thus:

She would cajole sweethearts into marriage or intimacy, induce them to take out life insurance and then poison them.

Riccardi said that when a victim of the "professional widow" died she would collect a share of the insurance money from other conspirators. He has sufficient information about the woman, he said, to issue police circulars asking her arrest. She is blamed in "10 to 15" deaths.

Capt. James Kelly, of the homicide squad, said the woman divorced a Hammonton, N. J., man who refused to take out life insurance. He said this man named others of the woman's associates, including another Hammonton husband who died in Camden, N. J., of "heart disease" six years ago. Detectives said the body would be exhumed to learn whether it contained poison.

Herman Petrillo, Philadelphia salesman, was third and convicted of first-degree murder for one death. Mrs. Carina Favato, 45, will be tried on a charge of murder in another death. Petrillo's cousin, Paul Petrillo, and two women in addition to Mrs. Favato are held on murder charges involving two other deaths.

Boy, 17, Who Shot Cab Driver Held Without Charge

Martin F. Bartschek, 55, District cab driver, shot in the temple Sunday by a 17-year-old youth who was on a "freedom" period from the National Training School, remained in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital yesterday.

Police held the confessed assailant at the Eleventh Precinct station pending the outcome of Bartschek's injury. No charges had been placed and it was said the boy would not be returned to the school for fear he might escape.

The boy signed a confession to police that he fired at Bartschek during an argument over the cab fare at Canal road near Weaver place.

2 Warrings Ask Separate Trial

Charles and Leo Paul Warring yesterday protested to District Court against being placed on trial a third time for criminal conspiracy in company with their brother, Emmitt, boss of the $2,000,000-a-year Foggy Bottom numbers racket gang. They asked a separate trial, which District Attorney Pine said he would oppose. They said unfavorable newspaper publicity attending the jury tampering exposure at Emmitt's trial would prevent their getting a fair trial and asked for severances.

Union to Appeal Strike Verdict

Philadelphia, April 4 (AP).—A Philadelphia hosiery workers' union, claiming a $711,932 strike-damage verdict against it "in effect repeals the Sherman antitrust act," moved today to carry the case at once to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Counsel for Branch 1, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and the Apex Hosiery Co., which brought the suit, conferred with District Judge William H. Kirkpatrick and announced both sides were anxious to get the case into the higher court.

Mrs. Helen Russell Sues for Divorce

Mrs. Helen P. Russell, Westchester Apartments, sued in District Court yesterday for a divorce from Francis M. Russell, saying they had lived apart five years. Her counsel, former District Attorney Rover, said Russell was an official of the Washington offices of the National Broadcasting Co.

The Russells, were married in Omaha, Nebr., in 1921, and have two children, 9 and 14 years old, whose custody was asked by the wife.

Rep. Owen Recovering After Pneumonia

Representative Emmett M. Owen, of Georgia, was reported out of danger yesterday at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken several days ago with bronchial pneumonia.

Representatives Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, suffering a relapse of bronchitis, and Joseph J. Mansfield, of Texas, suffering an intestinal disorder, were reported improving at Naval Hospital.

Four Die as Planes Collide in Flight At Launching of U. S. Aircraft Carrier Wasp

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Navy biplane, after crashing in midair with another plane, plunged through the roof of this house at East Braintree, Mass., yesterday and exploded. Twisted steel, all that remained of the plane, is shown at left. The other plane struck a house a half mile away. Four fliers perished

Both Machines Hit Houses, Set Fires; Residents Unhurt

BROWN BENSON

By the Associated Press.

Quincy, Mass., April 4.—A collision in flight of two naval planes sent four reservists plunging to death today at the launching of the giant aircraft carrier Wasp, newest addition to the Nation's sea power.

Few who watched the Wasp glide down the ways were aware of the tragedy, which struck almost at the moment Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Assistant Navy Secretary, broke a bottle of champaigne against the warship's bow.

Among the victims was Lieut. Comdr. Waldo H. Brown, 43, of Milton, whose wife, the former Frances Gray, Detroit heiress, witnessed the launching ceremonies. She quickly learned of the accident, but did not know immediately her husband was involved.

Plane Fires Dwelling

The others killed were Aviation Cadet Ellsworth Benson, 26, of Newton; Aviation Chief Carpenter's Mate Walter Kirk, 40, of Quincy, and Aviation Chief Machinist's Mate John Ausiello, 35, of Revere.

Lieut. Comdr. Michael Kernodle, commander of the Squantum naval air station, said he believed the men rode the planes to their deaths rather than risk the chance the craft might crash into the crowd. He pointed out that the crews of both planes had time to bail out.

Navy officials said the six standard scouting planes were going into "V" formation when two of the ships collided at an altitude of 1,500 feet.

One of the crashing craft began to disintegrate immediately, fragments falling away as it plummeted into a house in nearby Braintree, where it burst into flames and fired the dwelling.

The other hovered uncertainly before it went out of control and crashed into a dwelling, which ignited.

Wind Blamed

Occupants of the two homes escaped injury. A portion of the roof of a third house was sliced off by one of the planes.

Kernodle said inquiry convinced him the six ships were engaged in "conservative flying" when the accident occurred and that a strong wind may have been a contributing factor.

He said naval inquiries would be conducted to fix the damage to the three Braintree homes and to determine the cause of the accident.

Youth Respects Law, Pastor Tells Civitans

A new generation is growing up with a more loyal attitude toward the law, the Rev. Peter Marshall, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, told the Civitan Club yesterday at a luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel.

The board of directors of the Civitan Club met last night at the home of Dr. Grant S. Barnhart.

Hill Singers, Harmonica Player Signed Up for Folk Festival

Back from a scouting and lecturing tour of the Southeast, Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, director of the National Folk Festival, told yesterday of several new groups she has signed up to appear at the festival April 27-29 at Constitution Hall.

At Prestonburg, Ky., Miss Knott attended the opening of court, a gala event in the mountain community. After the lengthy sermon and prayer which traditionally open the court, Miss Knott was introduced to the crowd by the presiding judge and told the assemblage about the festival.

Later she attended a "singing" in which scores participated. Led by Edith Fitzpatrick James, a group of the country singers will come to Washington to present their old-time religious songs at the festival.

At Knoxville, Tenn., Miss Knott completed arrangements with L. L. McDowell for the participation of a group from nearby Smithville, who will present their traditional singing games under the sponsorship of Mayor J. E. Evans. The games are popular in communities which, for religious reasons, frown on dancing to fiddle accompaniment but see no harm in games danced to songs.

Deep in the North Carolina mountains, Miss Knott visited Crossnore School, institution which has given opportunities to thousands of underprivileged hill children. Dr. Mary M. Sloop, manager of the school, assured the festival director that a student group would appear at the festival. Included in their program will be English folk dances and many songs indigenous to the mountain community.

Ira E. Russell, harmonica player of West Durham, N. C., performed for Miss Knott at Chapel Hill. He will be sent to the festival by the Planters Cotton Oil and Fertilizer Co., sponsor of an amateur contest which Russell won.

Miss Knott spoke at a State festival held at Chapel Hill by the Carolina Dramatic Association. Afterward she attended a meeting called by Paul Green, playwright and president of the National Folk Festival Association, where leading folkiorists discussed the national festival.

Tickets for the festival have been available only since Monday, but the sale already is brisk. The box office, on the first floor of The Washington Post building, is open from 8 a. m. to midnight daily, including Sunday.

SEC Worker Asserts Incident Was Beside The Point in Her Case

amples just what my assumptions are based upon."

He called upon Miss Amorette W. Bledsoe, who "being a woman, just cried about things once." She entered the SEC in April, 1935, at $1,440 and now makes $1,620. Miss Bledsoe, said "I have received no promotion, absolutely none." She had seen, she said, several opportunities, but someone else always got the job.

Brassor said there was no solution to such cases, because "there is always somebody else a little better than somebody else." The length of service is an element, but there are other points for consideration, he asserted. "Don't you realize, Senator, that some employes will always stay in their grades? They might remain there 20, 30 or 50 years and never get promoted.

Ellender called up the record of Margaret L. Burton, who entered the service in April, 1935, as a CAF-2 junior stenographer at $1,440, rose to $1,620, $1,740, $2,000 and $2,300 and is today a CAF-6 junior administrative assistant at $2,400.

Brassor explained that Miss Burton was highly regarded by the general counsel; she had worked in that office and learned the practices, so her climb was natural, he said:

"Your argument is very eloquent," said Ellender. He recalled the case of William Dixon, Postoffice Department executive, who promoted a feminine employe three grades to become his secretary. "What that in the SEC?" inquired Brassor.

"No," replied Ellender, "I want to demonstrate that somebody can always bring up a good explanation." Brassor had insisted that some exceptions must be made in competitive promotions and that considerable "leeway" should be given executive officers in choosing their secretaries. They must be selected with an eye to how they can meet the public, answer telephones and work overtime when necessary, he said.

Eicher's Secretary Cited

Ellender called the case of Margaret M. Goerdt, who entered the SEC at $1,440 in October, 1935, and is at present a secretary to Commissioner Eicher at $2,300, a CAF-6 position. Brassor claimed this to be a victory for the merit system, inasmuch as the commissioner could, under the law, have gone outside civil service in filling the position.

"I would say she had a rapid rise in comparison to these older employes," commented Ellender.

From the right, Ellender drew the record of Miss Jean McKinnon, who entered the SEC in January, 1937, as a CAF-2 at $1,440 and who advanced to $1,620, $1,680 and, at present, $1,800, a secretary, CAF-3.

From the left, he drew Miss Kathryn Brueckner, who served in the Treasury from 1931 to 1936. She said she went to the SEC in 1936, complained of some "undeserved" salary raises there and said the employes were "resigned." Her salary, $1,620 when she went to the SEC, is now $1,740. Her original salary in the Government was $1,440. From the left he drew Miss Grace G. Clawson, who entered Government service in August, 1918, as a clerk at $1,000. She once worked for a private law firm for $2,800. The SEC attracted her because she thought opportunity would be better in a new agency. So she went there, she said, in September, 1934, at $1,620. She now receives $1,980. Her efficiency ratings have been excellent. She said she could not complain about others.

From the right Ellender drew the record of Miss Beatrice Stringham, who advanced from grade 2, $1,440, to grade 4, $1,800, within slightly more than a year. Brassor said the position Miss Stringham occupies was duly posted and competed for. Miss Alice Getty, who entered the SEC in 1935 at a salary of $1,400, and now earns $1,620, said she was satisfied and had no complaint to offer. Miss Agnes R. Hill, who entered service in 1920 at $1,200 and now gets $2,000, was likewise satisfied.

Ellender adjourned the committee until 2 p. m. today when cases from the Geological Survey will be discussed.

Stinson

old enough? With this modern age, it's hard for me to tell."

Upon examination by Justice Luhring, Miss Shoemaker admitted Mrs. Stinson worried before setting up a trust fund of $230,000 for Stinson before they were married and that her worry hinged on the word "irrevocable." She finally agreed that this worry was dispelled when Stinson assured the widow he would give up his claim to the money at any time it was so desired of him "just as any other gentleman would do."

The nurse also agreed with cross-examining attorneys that the dosage of sedatives she gave Mrs. Stinson was increased in the six years she was in her employ and that she had ample medicine and opportunity to drug the poetess, if she had desired to do so. While she gave her one tablet as a sedative two of the same variety would have acted as a hypnotic, she said.

"But if Mrs. Stinson was dopey or swaying or bloated during those weeks in Nova Scotia before the wedding, then I was unconscious too," she declared.

She said Stinson shipped his automobile to her in Alabama before he went to Europe in late 1937, but denied she knew he was making a will in her favor or increasing an insurance policy in her behalf "until after he had done it."

The only time Mrs. Stinson swayed during the wedding ceremony in Bar Harbor, according to Miss Shoemaker, was when Stinson kissed her.

"I believe he still loves her," she declared.

She said she considered "them both very extravagant" and often said so. "I think I was being unpleasant. I thought they were both throwing money away, but it was none of my business," she said.

In his effort to rush the testimony along, Justice Luhring said: "Is this not the situation: She had a case of nerves, was subject to crying spells, quarreled with you, blew hot and then blew cold."

In day-long questioning, Miss Shoemaker told the court she has received $3,000 from Stinson since she was ordered out of the Crounse home in late 1937.

"He told his lawyer to give me $1,500 because he felt he was the innocent cause of my trouble with Mrs. Crounse. I borrowed $1,000 from him and he sent me between $400 and $500 for the dog, which I am still taking care of," she said.

Miss Shoemaker denied Mrs. Crounse appeared drugged in the weeks before the wedding, said she was "in much better health than in 1936" and had been given less medicine. Charges that the nurse had poisoned her were made first about a month after the wedding and by Mrs. Stinson's cousin, she said.

The "medicine situation" was explained to the court by Miss Shoemaker, who said Mrs. Stinson "always raised a fuss" when one of the sedatives was given her. The other two medicines ordinarily used did not lead to the same opposition, she said.

A telegram was introduced as evi- that Mrss Shoemaker, while in Nova Scotia with Mrs. Crounse and Stinson, had ordered 200 tablets of the "unwelcome" sedative from Washington, although she said she had intended to ask for but 100. The tablets came in five bottles, she said, two of which were left in the Crounse home and two of which "remained in my medicine case and were taken to Alabama."

She declared some of the medicine had been poured out during "mad spells" both by herself and by Mrs. Stinson.

The controversial wedding night and the morning after were described by Miss Shoemaker. She said she joined Mrs. Stinson in thinking Stinson had "gone too far when he paid $30 for an orchid corsage" for the wedding. Mrs. Stinson, she declared, did not like the free manner in which Stinson spent her money and at times remarked, "I don't know how this is all going to end."

When leaving a New York Hotel after the honeymoon, Mrs. Stinson demanded a duplicate of the hotel bill and called for her car and chauffeur. "Joe's probably sold them, too," Miss Shoemaker quoted her as saying.

After the wedding at Bar Harbor, according to Miss Shoemaker, the two cars, two servants and two lovers started toward Portland. They stopped at Bangor, however, to mate the dog at a veterinarian's and they stopped at antique and glass shops "all along the way," Miss Shoemaker declared.

On the morning after the first night in Portland, the nurse said, Mrs. Stinson telephoned Miss Shoemaker.

"She told me to knock on Mr. Stinson's door when I came, and not on hers. When I got there she said she did not want to awaken Mr. Stinson because he had not got to sleep until 4 a. m.

"I could see through into the next rooms. One bed was made up and Mr. Stinson was in the other. Mrs. Stinson had a headache and later came down into the coffee ship for her breakfast. When I asked her about Mr. Stinson, she said, 'His majesty is having breakfast in his room.' She did not seem to like that very much."

After the entourage reached Stockbridge, where a week was spent, Miss Shoemaker testified that she was "rubbing Mrs. Stinson down with some Turkish towels in the bathroom, when Mr. Stinson appeared."

"She was extremely angry with him for entering and with me for leaving the door unlocked. She accused Mr. Stinson of just wanting to know what she looked like. It was that same day, I think that I heard them quarreling loudly, although I was several doors away.

"When I entered she was in hysterics and told me Mr. Stinson had said she was repulsive to him. I gave her some medicine. She said she was going straight to Reno.

"She quieted down that afternoon, though. I gave her some more medicine and they went out to buy some more glass."

come involved in a situation of this kind," the statement said in part.

Mary Livingston, wife and radio foil of Benny, was not present in court when her husband heard the verdict. It was for her, the comedian said, that he bought the smuggled jewelry in Paris—two diamond clips and a diamond and gold bracelet for $1,462. The duty on the jewelry would have come to $700, but as it turned out, Benny's bill for attempting this saving will be an estimated $42,224, including trial expenses.

Judge Leibell gave Benny until 4 p. m. to pay the $10,000 Federal fine, under threat of remanding him to jail to begin his sentence. Benny quickly paid.

Comedian "Ashamed"

"You must feel very much ashamed of yourself as you stand there," Judge Leibell said to Benny, before passing sentence.

The film star said, almost inaudibly, "I do."

"I think it a very poor return you have made to a country that has done so much for you," Judge Leibell concluded.

Benny's lawyers issued a statement in which Benny contended Chaperau had given him to understand that "there would be a perfectly legitimate saving in the amount of duty which would have to be paid."

to other commodities, would destroy Secretary of State Hull's reciprocal trade program. Cotton and wheat are this Nation's chief farm export crops, but sales abroad have dropped sharply.

Complicating the badly tangled Senate farm situation, Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, announced he would offer his domestic allotment plan as an amendment to the parity price proposal in the Senate. The Lee bill assures wheat farmers $1.25 a bushel and cotton farmers 20 cents a pound on domestically consumed portions of their crops. A rival "cost of production" bill already has been reported by the Agriculture Committee and also is on the Senate calendar.

Meanwhile, awaiting House action is the Bankhead bill passed by the Senate Monday, authorizing cotton farmers to repossess a portion of the Government's 11,250,000-bale stock of loan cotton for 5 cents a pound in return for not planting a similar amount. Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee called this "an inadequate approach to the solution of the problem."

by the party command to lead a comeback drive. As an assistant United States district attorney he won wide notice for his part in the prosecution of Al Capone and a half dozen other gangsters. The campaign revolved about local issues, but Representative McKeough (Democrat), Illinois, among others, had asked "1,000,000 votes of confidence" in Kelly and President Roosevelt.

Democrats had predicted a victory for Kelly would mean that Illinois, with 29 electoral votes, third largest cluster in the Nation, would remain in that party's column in the gubernatorial and Presidential elections next year. Harry B. Hershey, chairman of the Democratic State committee, quoted National Chairman James A. Farley as saying: "As Illinois goes, so will go the Nation in 1940."

Voyager Tells Of Gull Egg Diet

Rio de Janeiro, April 4 (U.P.).—Michael Formosa, Maltese-British yachtsman, told today of seven days in which he lived on seagull eggs and rain water after being shipwrecked on a barren mid-Atlantic island on a solo voyage which originally was to have taken him from Malta to Zanzibar on the East African coast.

He was rescued by the Italian liner Conte Grande, which removed him, naked and unconscious, from St. Pauls Rocks, tiny islet about 1 acre in area 500 miles off the northeastern coast of Brazil, and brought him here.

New York, April 4 (AP).—Eight negotiators, after reporting disagreement over a new wage and hour contract for the suspended bituminous coal industry, today were ordered to resume their efforts, with full power to reach an agreement.

Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers of America, announced the "miner's final proposition" was renewal of the old agreement for two years and elimination of the penalty clause for illegal strikes.

President Hits Defense Bill Pension Rider

'Any Civilian' Might Benefit at Great Cost to U. S., He Says

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., April 4.—President Roosevelt took a slap at Congress today for attaching to the Army defense bill a "rider" giving Reserve officers and enlisted men who may be disabled while on temporary 30-day duty the same retirement benefits accorded the regular Army.

"This question is, of course, open to full and adequate study," he declared in a formal statement, "but it seems a pity that without this study, this clause, which will cost the Government a large sum of money, has been tacked on to an emergency defense measure to which it has no relationship whatsoever."

The defense measure, authorizing $358,000,000 to give the Army 6,000 planes, increase Panama Canal defense, and train industry in production of war materials, was signed last night.

Would Cost Millions

At a press conference today the President said he was calling attention to the retirement "rider" because leaders of both parties have been trying to stop the practice of tacking nonrelated amendments onto bills.

He said the rider in question would cost the Government five or six million dollars a year, that it had "no relation whatsoever" to the title or purpose of the defense bill, and under it "any civilian, under certain circumstances, would get the same disability retirement privileges as those whose whole time is in the Government service."

Mr. Roosevelt stopped his car for the press interview while on the way to his daily swim in the Warm Springs foundation pool.

Studies Foreign Affairs

The President would not discuss foreign affairs, although he said he had been devoting most of his time here to studying the European situation. He said he knew of no development that had not been printed in the newspapers.

If Congress appropriates only $100,000,000 for relief instead of the additional $150,000,00 he requested, he said, 480,000 persons would have to be taken off relief rolls between now and July 1.

Mr. Roosevelt said he would end his vacation here Sunday afternoon and arrive in Washington around 11:15 a. m., Monday.

Receiving Home Has to Remain In Old Building

Failure of a House sub-committee to provide funds in the 1940 District appropriation bill for new quarters of the Receiving Home for Children will force the institution to remain in its antiquated building at 816 Potomac avenue southeast for at least another year, it was reported last night.

It was learned also that funds for a new Wilson Teachers College also were refused, although the sub-committee recommended building a new structure for the Abbott Vocational School at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

The supply bill is expected to reach the House Thursday.

U. S. Pajama Pants Outnumber Coats

Uncle Sam yesterday asked for bids on 2,004 more pairs of pajama pants than coats. The Veterans' Administration procurement division asked for offers on 11,208 pairs of flannelet pajama pants, and only 9,204 coats of the same material. Recently, another Government agency ordered 10 dozen pajama coats only.

In the absence of official reasons for the discrepancy, experts on veterans' clothing manufacture and sleep psychologists consolidated their guesses to either that veterans wear out pants faster than coats or that 2,004 veterans prefer nocturnally bared torsos.

Farm Labor, Growers Leave Pay-Hour Code Up to Andrews

By the Associated Press.

Organized labor and fruit and vegetable growers left to the wage-hour administration yesterday the job of writing a new regulation to exempt farm labor from the fair labor standards act.

At the end of a two-day hearing spokesmen for the industry asked Administrator Elmer F. Andrews to write a new definition of the exempted "area of production" without restricting the exemption to processing plants in towns of less than 25,000 population within 50 miles of their source of supply.

Some spokesmen for the industry said they wanted complete exemption from the minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the law for producers and processors on the grounds Congress intended to exempt agriculture from the additional costs imposed by the wage-hour act.

Boris Shishkin, American Federation of Labor economist, countered with objections to any administrative regulation which would exclude from the benefits of the act some 300,000 canning and packing house workers.

Both labor and the growers attacked the definition of area of production which the wage-hour administration proposed as a substitute for an earlier and narrower definition.

R. G. Phillips, of Rochester, N. Y., speaking for growers of apples and other fruit, said it would create "disruption and chaos" in marketing operations.

Shiskin said it would "have the effect of depressing the purchasing power and furthering unemployment in one of the lowest paid industries in the country."

The proposal to exempt workers in processing plants in towns of less than 25,000 population, Shiskin asserted, "would set a damaging precedent for labor legislation in all industries." He contended that many towns in this classification contained other types of industry subject to the wage-hour law.

Mounting Debt Tends to Keep Reich at Peace

Germany Has No Aggressive Intentions, Official Circles Believe

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 4.—An official reminder that Germany's indebtedness stood at 28,109,800,000 marks ($11,243,920,000) on January 31 was given today while many Germans watched Polish-British negotiations in London to try to get some inkling of what the future may bring.

The controlled press bitterly attacked Great Britain, but there were growing indications that the average German does not want war. Some observers believe that months of peace seemed assured unless Polish Foreign Minister Beck signs up with Great Britain in a manner that places Poland in a distinct anti-German camp.

They pointed out that Reichsfuehrer Hitler might act in his usual quick, decisive way if the Polish-British consultations, started yesterday in London, should place Poland completely in the British-French sphere, but nobody in authoritative Berlin circles believed Beck would make an unequivocal anti-Nazi choice.

Debt Increases Sharply

One reason cited for believing Hitler would not venture farther at present was the financial position disclosed in the official statistics, which showed an increase of nearly 10,000,000,000 marks (currently $4,000,000,000) in the German public debt during one year.

The figures also showed that the government owes German creditors 23,500,000,000 marks ($9,400,000,000). The balance comprises foreign debts and funds deposited in the Reichsbank of amounts which are due but cannot be paid for lack of foreign exchange.

The existence of an economic pinch was further exemplified—besides through a certain scarcity of food—when a new financial plan was launched March 25, providing for the payment of public bills with tax credit certificates on future income.

In Economic Transformation

Germany furthermore is passing through an economic transformation. It may be assumed that the Nazi regime wants to test the new plan before risiking any armed conflict.

In official circles the standardized viewpoint was expressed that Germany would do nothing unless provoked by England, that the Reich has no aggressive intentions and that Hitler would unsheath the sword only if German honor should be affected in the present international negotiations.

In the Diplomatic Corps, however, the general feeling seemed pessimistic, partly because of the continuing absence of the United States, Brazilian, British and French ambassadors, who were called home last fall "to report" on the German situation.

Metropolitan reports to its policyholders—

HIGHLIGHTS OF 1938

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company is a mutual company. It is operated solely for the benefit of its 29 million policyholders, whose life insurance with this Company totaled over $22,612,000,000 at the end of the past year.

In 1938, more than $566,300,000 was paid to policyholders and beneficiaries, and $176,000,000 was added to statutory reserves for payment of obligations which will accrue in future years under present policies. Dividends paid in 1938 amounted to $103,940,000. A still larger sum—$118,042,000—has been set aside for dividend payments in 1939.

Metropolitan has paid, since 1927, more than $5,000,000,000 to policyholders and beneficiaries.

More than $1,800,000,000 of life insurance protection was provided by the 3,330,151 new policies issued during the past year.

Assets held for the benefit of policyholders and beneficiaries—which include more than 100,000 carefully selected, diversified investments—amount to more than $4,900,000,000.

As part of its welfare program in 1938, Metropolitan distributed 68 million health booklets—an average of 1 every half-second—and published monthly health-education advertisements in magazines whose combined circulation for the year was over 300 million copies.

Metropolitan welcomes every opportunity to provide its policyholders with information that will enable them to have a clearer understanding of how the Company operates. To help accomplish this, the Company is publishing a series of educational advertisements in magazines, and seeks in various other ways to keep its policyholders informed. A booklet, soon to be available, contains a detailed account of Metropolitan's progress in 1938. We shall be glad to send a copy on request.

Metropolitan's Business Report for the year ending December 31, 1938.

Re-election Of Lebrun Held Certain

Vote Today Likely To Express Unity In European Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 4.—Premier Daladier tonight whipped Parliament into line and virtually assured the re-election of President Lebrun tomorrow as a demonstration of national unity in the European crisis.

Deputy Fernand Bouisson, independent former president of the Chamber of Deputies and Lebrun's most serious rival, tonight announced withdrawal of his candidacy, leaving Senator Justin Godart the only other formal candidate.

Daladier's campaign for Lebrun's re-election as a demonstration of national union behind the premier's semidictatorial government was believed in political quarters to have influenced Bouisson's decision.

A poll of the parliamentary lobbies indicated Lebrun would receive at least 500 of a possible total of 932 votes at tomorrow's national assembly.

The Chamber of Deputies and Senate will meet to vote at Versailles at 2 p. m. (9 a. m. Eastern standard time).

The Communists and Socialist parties planned to offer last-minute candidates, and their vote was expected to be split among the candidates with a possibility that Lebrun might fail on the first ballot to obtain the necessary majority.

Most of the animosity, however, was directed against Premier Daladier, with the parliamentary opposition seeking an opportunity to attack the government by voting against the president.

Knox Suggests Free Trade With South America

New York, April 4 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and Republican, candidate for Vice President in 1936, said today he would be "perfectly willing to see the experiment of free trade tried" with South America.

"Especially with Brazil," he added.

Col. Knox, returning from an extensive tour of South America, said:

"The United States must consider very carefully whether it should not change its traditional policy of equal treatment for all nations and treat South American trade as a quasi-domestic problem. We have the United States, the greatest industrial Nation, and South America, the greatest agricultural region in the world, in juxtaposition."

question of Stanhope's future in the government.

["It may be that the government will think his words innocuous; if not, it is difficult to see how he can retain his present position. Lawyers and members of Parliament find difficulties in discovering any power of a publicity department to insist or even advise that the words of the head of a department should not be reported."—Editor's note.]

Ever since Chamberlain in Commons promised Britain would fight "at once" if need be along with the Poles to preserve Polish independence there have been fears in authoritative quarters that swift European events might result from the pledge.

"We obviously had our eyes open when we gave that pledge," one source said.

Nevertheless, some quarters indicated that with due allowance for the present European uncertainty, the threat, if any existed at all, was less likely tonight than it was yesterday.

Speech Creates Flurry

EARL STANHOPE

German newspapers are also claiming that the British "encirclement plan" is already a dismal failure.

The question of what measures Germany will take to block this "encirclement" was still unanswered when Hitler left Berlin again late tonight for Berschtesgaden.

He is expected to stay at Berchtesgaden at least through Easter and possibly until the celebration of his fiftieth birthday on April 20. There was still no official confirmation tonight of persistent reports that both Premier Mussolini and Gen. Franco will come to his birthday party, in order to stage a spectacular demonstration to the world that Germany is no longer isolated.

Conspiracy Charged

The former habit of the German press of singling out certain Englishmen for attacks has now completely disappeared. England itself—and more especially the England of wartime memories—was portrayed as the villain of the conspiracy to stifle Germany in all official comments here today. The second theme which ran through all German newspapers is the warning that "This time—unlike 1914—Germany will not wait until the iron ring has closed around it."

German confidence in the collapse of England's eleventh-hour diplomacy is based chiefly on the belief that Polish and Rumanian statesmen will remember the lack of support given to Czecho-Slovakia by her friends. But the dangers of any alliance which includes the Soviet Union are also being pointed out to Germany's neighbors.

German Press Raging At Great Britain

By Joseph Barnes.

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, April 4.—Reichsfueher Hitler returned to Berlin tonight from his two-day North Sea cruise to find the campaign against England—which he, himself, put in high gear in his speech last Saturday—already more violent in language than anything Germans have read or heard about their former enemy since the World War.

In Nazi circles and among S. S. and S. A. troops, the wartime greeting, "Gott strafe England," has come back to fashion. The words "London" and "England" are reported to be disappearing all over Germany from the names of hotels, streets and restaurants.

Use Powerful Invectives

The Nazi propaganda machine has concentrated its most powerful invectives on the charge which is most certain to arouse Germans whether they are Nazis or not—that England is again trying to encircle and starve the German people.

To Germans who remember the war-time English blockade, this accusation apparently stirs emotions so deep that they are not even aware of the paradox by which

Cruiser Is Reply As Turks Ask Part of Syria

French Send Warship To Alexandretta; Trade For Dardanelles Hinted

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 4.—France tonight disclosed she was reinforcing her defenses in the Sanjak (district) of Alexandretta, Syria, after Turkey informed her of a desire to annex the 10,000-square mile area "as quickly as possible."

Officials said that "as a precautionary measure" France would send a cruiser to Alexandretta harbor, strategically situated in the eastern Mediterranean, to reinforce the garrison which now is kept at 1,500 men.

The disclosure followed assurances by the Turkish ambassador, that Turkey would not seize the Sanjak by force.

Trade for Dardanelles

French sources described the problem as "delicate." It was understood the Turks had suggested that France should abandon the Sanjak to them in exchange for guarantees to allow French and British warships to pass through the Turkish-controlled Dardanelles from the Mediterranean into the Black Sea in event of war.

Alexandretta, a semi-independent territory in northern Syria with a population of 200,000 and an excellent harbor, is a part of the League of Nations Syrian mandate to France. By a French-Turkish friendship treaty of last July 4, an equal number of Turkish and French troops were to be stationed in the district. However, last October France withdrew almost all French and Syrian troops, and the Sanjak was left almost exclusively in the hands of Turkish officials and Turkish troops.

Today Turkey was reported demanding annexation of Alexandretta as the price for supporting the British and French-led "Stop Hitler" bloc, and one report, published in the conservative newspaper Le Figaro, said a Turkish army of 60,000 already was at the Alexandretta frontier.

Lever on Rumania

(At Ankara a Turkish foreign office spokesman denied Turkish troops were about to move into Alexandretta.)

Such guarantees as Turkey was reported tonight to be offering would give Britain and France a potential lever to swing Rumania openly into the "Stop Hitler" camp.

Britain and France must convince Rumania, it is held, that they could implement any military commitments effectively. The Black Sea might provide the answer, since it is Rumania's "back door."

in a Mediterranean war. Without committing herself so far, she was believed to have suggested a high price for a pledge to fight for western Europe's three small neutrals. She would like:

A British agreement to replace League of Nations control of the Free City of Danzig by a committee of one German, one Pole and one of another nationality.

A loan for rearmament—$100,000,000—was suggested in some quarters.

Provision of British colonial territory as a home for Polish Jews, who would be evacuated under a broad scheme to be financed by the Jews themselves.

Beck will see United States Ambassador Kennedy tomorrow.

Bishop Freeman Says Christianity Is on Increase

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, yesterday told a large audience at Epiphany Holy Week services that "the challenging personality of Christ has never been more evident than now in modern history."

"This Nation," affirmed the prelate, "adheres, and adheres with increased devotion, to what it believes in and calls 'Christian civilization.' It holds to the conviction that Christianity and democracy are essentially and vitally related."

"I hold," he said, "that there is more inarticulate religion in our world of today than at any time since Christ was crucified."

The bishop will speak again today and Thursday at Epiphany Church, and on Good Friday at the Washington Cathedral.

MAYBE any station would have oil that's at least of the right Summer grade . . . let's say No. 20, No. 30 or No. 40.

You must choose patented Conoco Germ Processed oil to know that the engine parts—as if "magnetized"—will attract and hold a shield of OIL-PLATING. Like the chromium-plating that shields and smooths the bumpers, OIL-PLATING holds ever-fast . . . it's drain-proof . . . never leaves a precious part naked to friction, during all your thousands of starts and thousands of miles this Summer. located to the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The vessel, of 6,000 tons and mounting 5-inch guns, will be the first vessel ever designed and built as a mine layer in this country. Other vessels of the type have been converted merchant vessels. Its cost is estimated at $10,000,000.

Commander R. S. Field, director of Commerce Department Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, reported that more merchant ships are under construction in the United States than at any time since the World War. Practically all merchantmen are built according to Navy specifications with gun platforms and high speeds necessary for their use as naval auxiliaries in time of war.

Planes capable of speeds above 400 miles an hour are expected under the air expansion program. Five types are to be bought under the first increment: Four-engined bombers of the "flying fortress" improved design, single pursuit planes, pursuit interceptors, attack bombers, and photographic planes. In announcing the plans, the War Department conservatively announced that the interceptor would have a speed "much over 350 miles per hour."

Both the pursuit types are equipped with the latest Allison engines. The single-engined craft to be purchased are the P-36A and XP-40 developed by the Curtiss Co. The latter is similar to the 36-A except that it has a liquid cooled engine and built-in blower type of super-charger giving it higher speed.

The attack bomber is a new type recently tested at Wright Field, Ohio, under a design competition. Carrying both bombs and machine guns, the two-engined monoplane's range from 8½ to 9 tons in weight. Three manufacturers, Stearman, North American and Glenn L. Martin, are preparing to go into large scale production of the type.

Funds for the 565 planes are carried in the $513,000,000 War Department appropriation bill, which has passed both the Senate and House and now awaits decision on Senate amendments. Money for planes, training, new personnel, air base and armament will be appropriated this session for expenditure after July 1.

Hull Ignores Big Manchuria Trade, Says Nye

U. S. 1938 Exports to Puppet State All-Time High, Senator Asserts

By Lee Rashall.

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

The State Department last night was accused of "window-dressing" in its attempt to sustain its strong stand against Japanese violations of American rights in China and Manchukuo.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, member of the Military Affairs Committee, declared the department has possibly "ignored the facts" of America's trade in that region.

Nye brought forth figures of the Department of Commerce to show that trade between the United States and Manchukuo reached an all-time high in 1938, in the latter part of which year Secretary of State Hull addressed his stern note to Nippon, declaring:

"Equality of opportunity or the open door has virtually ceased to exist in Manchuria. A large part of American enterprise which formerly operated in Manchuria has been forced to withdraw from that territory as a result of the preferences in force there."

Nye said United States exports to the Japanese puppet state jumped to $17,000,000 in 1938, more than $6,000,000 above even the prosperous 1929.

Foreign Policy Of U.S. Aids Peace, Says Wile

The Administration is taking "an enlightened and a purely American view of the international situation" and is not "playing any other nation's game," Frederic William Wile, Evening Star political commentator, said in a prepared address read before the Women's Guild of Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md., last night. In Wile's absence because of illness the address was read by Howard Bailey, Washington newspaperman.

Banker Advises U. S. Get Rid of Half Its Gold

Says It's Like Poker; When Others Lose All Game Will Be Over

By the Associated Press.

Percy H. Johnston, Wall street banker, told the Senate Silver Committee yesterday it would be of benefit to the United States to "get rid of six or seven billion dollars in gold and scatter it around the world." That would be nearly half this country's accumulation of the yellow metal.

The chairman of the Chemical Bank and Trust Co., smoking a pipe as he testified, said he regarded the accumulation of gold stocks in this country as a deterrent to world trade.

Senator Thomas (Democrat—Oklahoma) asked Johnston what would happen if the United States obtained all the gold in the world.

"It's going to be like a poker game," the witness replied. "If we won all the money and the other fellow didn't have any, the game would be over."

Johnston, who has urged repeal of the Silver Purchases Act, under which the Government buys both foreign and domestic metal, said he did not agree that Congress could make silver worth $1.25 an ounce by merely fixing that price by law.

Walter E. Trent, technical director of the Rocky Mountain Metal Foundation, contended that the Treasury had made a profit by buying silver at an average price of 52 cents an ounce when by law its monetary value was fixed at $1.29.

Johnston said he did not agree.

"I don't think if you bought a barrel of potatoes for 50 cents and the Government put a label on it of $2, it would be worth $2," Johnston said.

The Commerce Department disclosed meanwhile another sharp drop in United States merchandise sales to Germany in February.

An analysis of foreign trade showed United States sales to the Reich in that month, totaling $5,176,000, were $3,000,000 less than in the same month last year. Sales to Germany for the first two months of 1939, amounting to $11,571,000, were $8,000,000 below last year's figures.

Dr. Walther Funk, German economic minister and president of the Reichsbank, recently criticized this country's absorption of gold.

Meanwhile, United States imports from Germany, upon which an additional tariff duty of 25 per cent recently was imposed, gained slightly in the first two months of the year. February imports totaled $4,930,000, compared with $4,119,000 in the same month last year, while imports for both January and February, aggregating $10,161,000, compared with $9,920,000 for the similar period last year.

Iraq Mob Slays British Consul After Ghazi Dies in Crash

Son, 3, to Succeed King; Natives Told 'English Killed Him'

By the Associated Press.

Baghdad, April 4.—A 3-year-old boy became the King of Iraq and the youngest monarch in the world with the death of his father, King Ghazi I, in an automobile accident today.

The succession was announced by the council of ministers as thousands of Arabs gathered before the royal "palace of flowers" and beat their breasts in mourning for the 27-year-old sportsman-monarch who crashed his automobile into an electric light pole at 12:40 a. m.

During the mourning at Mosul, on the River Tigris 200 miles northwest of Baghdad, G. E. A. C. Monck-Mason, British consul, was killed by a mob which burned the consulate.

(Reports reaching London said agitators had aroused the mob by declaring that "the English had killed the king.)

An estimated 50,000 mourners filed past Ghazi's coffin in the royal court this afternoon.

The council appointed the baby's uncle, Emir Abdul Ilah, provisional regent, which the widowed Queen Ilyah said was according to Ghazi's wishes.

The Chamber of Deputies on April 6 will elect a five-man council of regency.

Ghazi, educated at an exclusive English school and by nomadic Bedouin chieftains, claimed descent from Mohammed. He was passionately fond of motoring and flying.

Unlike his father, Ghazi disliked regal pomp and preserved a social and political aloofness which caused concern in Baghdad official circles. His reign began September 9, 1933, when his father died.

Albania Denies Italian Threat To Freedom

opening the door to Italian troops through revision of the treaty.

Reports of possible Italian action in Albania had brought a British hint that such a step would violate the British-Italian friendship accord.

[Diplomatic information in London said Italy might "protectively occupy Albania within 48 hours, according to the United Press. Italian warplanes were reported to have left their mainland bases, and some were rumored to have landed in Albania.

[The Albanian government at Tirana denied Italian intimations that King Zog had asked Premier Mussolini to establish a protectorate over his country, already under the firm tutelage of Italy.—Editor's note.]

Diplomatic circles heard privately that Italy had explained to Britain that some Italian troops had been sent to Albania to quell a movement against King Zog, which had been suppressed.

Authoritative sources confirmed reports of Italian troop concentrations around Brindisi, on the Adriatic coast opposite Albania, but asserted they were intended to reinforce Italian garrisons in the Dodecanese Islands, facing Turkey, and perhaps in Libya during present tension throughout Europe.

Zog Reported Ill

The report of Italian troop movements to Albania lacked confirmation in official circles, but some usually well-informed Italians considered it might be true. They indicated that an Italian guardianship over Albania was desirable because Zog was reported to be ill of malaria and to have political enemies in Albania who might try to unseat him at any time.

Diplomats, meanwhile, thought Italian troops might be sent to Albania in case Yugoslavia, to the north of that country and across the Adriatic from Italy, showed a tendency to join attempts to "encircle" the Rome-Berlin powers. They troops were at Bari and Brindisi, across the Strait of Otranto from Albania, with troopships standing by.

British Ambassador Lord Perth called on Italian Foreign Secretary Count Ciano today and it was at this meeting, diplomats understood, that the account of unrest in Albania was given to explain troop movements.

Bund Visions a German Fuehrer for U. S., Organizes Teutons for 'Mission,' FBI Says

Bund

33 Madison street northwest, who headed the local unit of the Friends of the New Germany before it disbanded in the spring of 1936, declared yesterday his allegiance belonged entirely to the United States and that he would enlist to fight Hitler if he attempted to take over this country, as he did Czecho-Slovakia.

At the same time the FBI revealed:

Criminal prosecutions may result as a result of a new investigation by G-men of the bund and similar organizations to ascertain whether they are engaging in spy activities. Federal statutes which may entrap Nazi and other agitators include requirements for registration of certain kinds of firearms, such as submachine guns, and registration of foreign agents with the State Department.

G-men had been blocked in an effort to examine the bank accounts and transactions of the bund. Fritz Kuhn, national leader of the organization, explained that he "lacked confidence in the (Roosevelt) Administration and would have to give further consideration to the question of allowing agents access to the accounts."

Legislation is under consideration to prohibit, under certain conditions, the wearing of uniforms of foreign governments. This would strike at drills by Nazi "storm troopers" attired in uniforms bearing swastikas. Some States now have such laws.

Justice Department officials believe the actual membership of the bund is larger than figures given in the FBI report. Confidential estimates range between 15,000 and 25,000.

May Have Members Here

Despite the fact that no local exists in Washington, so far as is known, some Germans here are believed to be bund members. Justice Department officials do not believe the number is large, but it may exceed 15, the estimate made by Kuhn in the FBI report.

Kuhn, in an interview with a G-man a little over a year ago, said political contact men were being appointed in each State in the Union "to establish and maintain contacts" with local and State political situations for the national leader and District leaders.

Kuhn hoped at that time to establish a Southern department of the bund. When the report, dated December 31, 1937, was written, there were three departments—Eastern, Middle Western and Western. Kuhn revealed plans for setting up locals in Houston, Dallas and Austin, Tex. Groups having similar ideals, he said, were operating in those cities.

Kuhn Changes Estimate

In refusing to turn over to G-men the membership records of the bund, Kuhn said his estimate of a national membership of 8,299 was within 20 per cent of the correct figure. When first interviewed by G-men, he insisted the bund had 200,000 members.

Barthelmess, a photoengraver employed by a local establishment, said he had "nothing to hide."

He said he had not paid bund dues since 1936. He still receives bund literature, he declared, but has turned down requests that he take the lead in forming a bund local here.

"I have worked in Washington for ten years," he said, "and I have a family here. I am an American citizen and I am not going to be false to my citizenship. It is my duty to fight for this country and I would willingly fight against any attacker."

"Real" Target Practice Denied

Barthelmess said the object of the local unit of Friends of the New Germany—the predecessor organization which became the bund in the spring of 1936—was to try to combat reports which, in the minds of members, gave a false picture of conditions in Germany.

The local unit did not engage in target practice in the real sense, he insisted. This information was given the FBI agent, he said, in response to questions as to whether the group had any airplanes, machine guns or other military equipment. Members of the unit, he said, merely engaged in occasional target contests at outings.

"I have cut my bridges with Germany," Barthelmess said. Democracy failed in Germany because Germans "need a commander," he declared. But he preferred the democratic institutions of this country, else he would not remain here, he said.

Barthelmess could not understand the seizure of Czecho-Slovakia.

The Bund's Vision

The vision of the future indulged in by American Nazis is embodied in the following excerpts from a booklet distributed by the bund:

"We (Germans in America) have become warners and callers, fighters and preparers of the way for a new era. We are still few—the ones to whom one does not pay attention. But that will change when the hour of emergency and danger will force the American citizen of German blood to take a stand and make a decision. Then there will be only one way for every human being with the same mental attitude—the way of voluntary but absolutely binding obligation (allegiance) to ONE selected, tested, exemplary and determined leadership. Then the few will become the many: the many will become the entire national community of American citizens of German blood. Fired by the irrepressible strength of activity which for so long has been tied down but which then will become free, fired by a determined spirit of constructive creation, this community of creative people will attempt to solve the great tasks which have been set for it . . ."

Colin Ross, in his book, "Our America—the German Share in the United States," the FBI points out, phophesies that a leader will arise among Americans of German extraction—"a German Thomas Paine."

Expensive All Round

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers has announced that it will appeal from the order of the Federal District Court in Philadelphia, directing a C. I. O. union of that city to pay the sum of $711,932 to a local hosiery mill. The judgment was the result of the company's suit against the union for damages incurred during a seven weeks' sitdown strike in 1937.

The application of this stern judgment thus awaits the decision of the higher courts. And since the property and assets of the union members were, by agreement of counsel, exempted from attachment, it is in any case problematical that the company can ever effectively recoup itself for losses brought about by this wholly illegal strike.

The legal and financial aspects of the case, however, are at the moment overshadowed by the moral and psychological effect. A punitive judgment of this character should help to bring home to union officials that the rights enjoyed by organized labor are not and cannot be divorced from equally real responsibilities. However valid the grievances of the workers involved, and these the jury no doubt took into account, the methods employed to redress these grievances were without the slightest sanction of law. During the forceful occupation of the plant much valuable machinery was wrecked and its entire business brought to a standstill. The jury found that the union "authorized" much of this damage.

The judgment is severe. But the anarchic actions which it now calls to account were intolerable. The action of the Philadelphia court should greatly help to encourage restraint in the leadership of new and unfledged unions, and should therefore discourage social violence. It is not, of course, any constriction of the right to withdraw labor power peacefully whenever a disciplined union feels that such action is essential in defense of labor's interests.

Our Physical Assets

The Rev. Edward A. Keller, director of the Bureau of Economic Research of Notre Dame University, has just published a study of the physical assets of the United States, covering the years 1922 to 1933 inclusive. The survey is modestly described as a "primer of economics," intended for adults. However, only a person with considerable knowledge of statistical method can appreciate the great amount of work required to assemble, analyze and present in acceptable form the voluminous supporting statistical data in the main body of the report and in the appendices.

The sources of information—chiefly Government reports—are given, together with explanations of the methods employed in refining and classifying data. There is an abundance of material to engage the attention of the student of economics who has a statistical bent. Yet the reader without specialized economic training will also find the method of presentation simple and the classifications easy to understand.

For the purpose of the study, wealth is defined as "all useful, physical things, capable of control and ownership by human beings." This definition has the advantage of concentrating attention upon the tangible assets given by nature and produced by man. In final analysis these material things determine whether a nation is really wealthy—that is, whether it possesses the resources needed to provide its people with the necessities and comforts of life.

Definitions of wealth vary according to the preference of individual economists and the differing purposes of analytical discussions. But however one may choose to define wealth, it is most important always to keep in mind the distinction between material goods which directly satisfy needs and mere claims to goods. The Notre Dame study, by making available in simple and compact form facts about our material existence, should aid in removing the confusion of thought that results from too much superficial theorizing. Of course, after we have assembled facts about our economy, their significance has to be established by means of theorizing. But a knowledge of our economic environment is a necessary preliminary to intelligent understanding of the problems of economic life.

The Notre Dame study, which is the first of a series, is an interesting and important contribution, for it helps to provide the kind of factual background that is a defense against vague generalizations and loose thinking.

Behind The Eight Ball

For a long time Mussolini has looked on with hungry eyes while his erstwhile disciple, Adolf Hitler, has gobbled up one slice of territory after another.

There is Ethiopia, of course. But Ethiopia does not compare either in strategic importance or in actual economic value with Austria and Czecho-Slovakia. Ethiopia is still much more of a liability than an asset and while it was acquired by Italy at a considerable cost in blood and treasure, the expansion of the Third Reich has been the result of threats of force alone. In Spain also Mussolini has plunged heavily, with little chance of securing dividends, if the supporters of the victorious Nationalists are to be believed.

The Duce cannot help being chagrined and perturbed by the much greater success of his fellow dictator. The disproportion between the two partners of the totalitarian axis has steadily increased, to Italy's disadvantage. And that has had two very serious results for the Fascist kingdom.

In the first place it has increased Italian insecurity. Already at the Brenner, Germany may some day decide to seize the wholly German South Tyrol, to push down to the Adriatic and thus dispute with Italy that arm of the sea which Mussolini has long hoped to transform into an Italian lake. And, secondly, by goading Great Britain and France into active hostility, Hitler has indirectly and involuntarily made any concessions to the Duce more difficult.

Mussolini had hoped to use the Berlin-Rome axis as a lever with which to wrest territory and favors out of the democratic powers, particularly in the Mediterranean. That hope, as Premier Daladier's recent speech makes clear, has gone aglimmering. Standing up to the more powerful dictator, the democratic powers are in no mood to knuckle down to the weaker member of the team.

The upshot of recent developments, so far as Italy is concerned, has thus been wholly unfavorable. The Italian people are far from enthusiastic about the axis and have never recovered from the shock of Austria's disappearance. If Mussolini's waning prestige is to be restored, therefore, he, too, is compelled to make some spectacular gestures to show that Hitler is not the only one capable of great deeds.

Unhappily for Mussolini, the path of further conquests is not an easy one. The Mediterranean, which is Italy's present sphere of ambition, is dominated by Great Britain and France, which, in their present mood, are not offering concessions on a platter. In this area Albania is the only available area of expansion easily open to Italy.

Albania has for ten years been allied with Italy. It is doubtful whether this tiny state would or could join any combination hostile to her neighbor across the Adriatic. And by the same token it can be taken for granted that her harbors and air bases would be placed at Italy's disposal in the event of a war involving the latter nation. For Italy to take over Albania, a poor, mountainous country, with limited resources, would, therefore, seem to be a gratuitous gesture. Yet that is what Mussolini has been threatening to do, if London reports are to be credited.

The annexation of Albania might actually work to Italy's disadvantage. By antagonizing Yugoslavia, with whom Italy has enjoyed friendly relations of late, it would tend to increase Italian insecurity. Yet Mussolini may be so badly in need of a victory of some kind that he may throw discretion to the winds. Blocked in other directions, he may, despite warnings, decide to follow what seems the line of least resistance—which is across the narrow Straits of Otranto to Albania.

The House Saves Time

Because of the pressure of other business and the desire for a holiday on Good Friday it is reported that the House will devote a single day—Thursday of this week—to the District appropriations bill. That necessarily means a hasty examination of only the chief features of the bill and virtually automatic approval. Under these circumstances the assumption that Congress as a body actually legislates for the District is rather far-fetched. To rush a detailed appropriation bill through the House in a single day is merely to accord it mechanical approval.

District residents may properly complain about this casual treatment of local affairs. It will doubtless mean that the District supply bill will be passed before citizens have an opportunity to learn what its provisions are. For the measure will not be made public by the Appropriations Committee until the brief debate in the House is ready to begin.

From the viewpoint of Congressmen, however, criticism of this haste seems less valid. Congress is overworked with national and international affairs. It is not unnatural that the local budget should be considered as an added burden to be disposed of as easily as possible. Hasty action on this District measure seems to be particularly excusable because few members of the House will have any information concerning its provisions in any event.

The logical conclusion is that Congress ought not to be spending even a single day upon District appropriations. The task of formulating a municipal budget and putting it into effect could be done far more effectively and satisfactorily by a local governing body familiar with District needs and problems. As it rushes the Capital City's appropriation bill through on Thursday, the House may well reflect upon the additional time that can be saved by action upon plans now well under way for the creation of a real District government.

Another Panacea

For a brief period on Monday the Senate faced the cotton dilemma—and then decided to dodge the issue. Senators thoroughly familiar with the gloomy outlook for American cotton retold the story of diminishing exports, of increasing surpluses, of vast potential losses on cotton held by the Government. But the only remedy they had to offer consisted of additional subsidies and intensification of measures that have contributed to present difficulties.

By making excessive loans on cotton the Administration has accumulated an enormous surplus—the largest in the history of the country. So now the Senate proposes to return 3,000,000 bales of this cotton to growers, along with a handsome bonus. The 1937-38 cotton thus to be released has cost the Government 9 cents per pound, although the average cost of the Government's holdings is 10 cents. It will be returned to farmers for 5 cents, at a loss to the Treasury of 4 cents per pound, or $60,000,000, if farmers take full advantage of the scheme.

To be eligible for this subsidy, farmers would have to reduce their acreage below the limits prescribed under the AAA program by an amount equivalent to the cotton they withdraw. The effect of the bill would probably be to reduce the surplus by 3,000,000 bales without increasing the total amount of cotton expected to be available for marketing during the coming year. If the additional drain upon governmental funds could be overlooked, something could be said for the bill as a temporary expedient.

The most discouraging fact is the Senate's willingness to add a $60,000,000 poultice to this economic boil without attempting to deal with fundamental causes responsible for the piling up of our huge cotton surplus. At present the Government has 11,000,000 bales of cotton stored in warehouses under loan. The 1939 crop is estimated at 12,000,000 bales. But the consumption of American cotton is expected to be considerably less than 11,000,000 bales, largely because of the declining foreign purchases.

Senator Barkley summed up the dilemma when he declared: "We cannot continue to pile up these unsalable surpluses. If we cannot use the product in the United States and cannot sell it abroad, we cannot continue to produce it and expect the Government to loan money on it, merely to hold it forever, no matter how long the unfavorable condition may last." But the Senate dodged that issue and voted another subsidy.

The simple fact is that the United States must either change its agricultural policy or face a permanent loss of foreign markets for many farm products, of which cotton is the most important. While we have been endeavoring to curtail production and making loans to peg prices, cotton growers in other lands have greatly expanded their output. The United States cannot hope to regain its position in the world market unless it is ready to compete on more or less even terms with other producers.

But a policy bringing a more favorable price relation between American and foreign fiber might not prove to be good politics. Senators from the cotton States ask taxpayers to finance liquidation of the surplus chiefly as a means of raising present prices. With 1940 just around the corner, there is more talk of "parity prices," export bounties and special benefits for farmers than of intelligent planning to preserve a great industry. It is time for the country to wake up to the fact that repeated panaceas such as the Smith-Bankhead bill cumulatively threaten disaster for American agriculture.

Loving And Kissing

Once upon a time "Oscar" was a Celtic name meaning "a bounding warrior." But the University of Richmond has changed all that. There is nothing of the warrior about Richmond's Oscar though he may (since he is kin to those who kiss and tell) be somewhat of a bounder.

"Oscar" is the nickname of an osculometer, a machine built under the direction of Dr. R. E. Loving, physicist. It is designed to measure the intensity of a kiss. Boy grabs a wire, girl grabs a wire, boy and girl clinch and the wheels go round.

If the thing works, we are told, "oomph" may no longer be listed among the imponderables.

Oomph? Humph!

"Scientists are trying to harness the atom, which travels in an infinitely small orbit at the rate of 87,000 miles a second."—Science note. We don't believe they'll ever be able to put even a bridle on a thing like that.

At a Yorkana, Pa., auction sale a buggy was sold for 20 cents. It's beginning to look as if we might as well abandon all hope for a return of the horse-and-buggy days.

Rich Men in Shell Holes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An era of prosperity may be on the way. Now that the readers of The Post have been enlightened by Mr. Gilbert D. Layton, certainly, with the war clouds hovering over them, there will be a number of men anxiously striving to make that $20,000 or more per year, that, according to Mr. Layton's remarks, will exempt them from duty in the front-line trenches.

No doubt, prior to reading Mr. Layton's letter, a great many people had been laboring under the impression that you could still have entree to water-filled shell-holes in time of war, regardless of what your income might be. In fact it has been reliably reported that a number of American men with incomes in excess of $20,000 actually served in the last World War and were even permitted to suffer the same hardships that the other soldiers encountered.

Suppose Mr. Layton is wrong about this $20,000 income exempting one from war service—suppose that he should at the same time find himself shivering in a shell hole in a war? Isn't it just possible that he might be inclined to agree with Dorothy Thompson about Senator Bone's war-profits tax bill?

Here's hoping sour grapes won't be used for rations should there be a war.

Shearing the Dollar

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Inherently disposed to espouse the cause of the underdog by shearing the wings of the dominating mighty, we Americans seem to have been latterly impelled by high-powered experimentation to disregard all wise restraining influences.

We seem to have been inspired to concentrate our endeavors toward shearing the value of the so-called "almighty dollar" until it knows no rest. Hounded from the time it leaves our mint—already suffering from malnutrition because of devaluation—it is immediately beset with the official shearers. Beginning with the income tax, the so-called "almighty dollar" is continuously besieged by our own espoused allies, those "hidden and unseen taxes" or enemies until, when arrived in safety and in possession of the thrifty, it is already worn to a thin frazzle. Even then its security is more or less dependent upon the will of the massed minority of thriftless, who, lying covetously in wait, clamor for either further starvation of the dollar—by encouraging further devaluation or inflation.

Taxation of Churches

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Among the depths of unreason reached by the Administration's "fellow travelers," perhaps the lowest is that of the bill now in Congress (H. R. 11) to include the churches among the "industries" taxable under the social security act. The scheme is illegal, the Federal Government having been given no jurisdiction over the internal operations of the churches. It is unnecessary, as at least 40 Protestant denominations have their own old-age provisions for ministers, and no Catholic pastor nor Jewish rabbi has ever been allowed to die in want.

This new scheme is strongly suggestive of those "anti-God" people by whom our country has been infested of late, who foster the Church Taxation League. If the church submits to it, it has degenerated sadly since the days when Henry IV, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, was kept standing three days in the snow outside the castle at Canossa, awaiting audience with Pope Gregory Hildebrand.

Recognition of Franco

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recognition of Gen. Franco by the United States last week will certainly have the effect of encouraging Fascist aggression in Latin and South America, and is thus a direct blow at our own democracy.

Everyone knows that the defeat of the legally elected loyalist government of Spain was due to the invading armies and war supplies furnished by Hitler and Mussolini. The military victory of Franco is therefore a further step in the world-conquest plans of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis. The disclosure of Hitler's conspiracies in Patagonia gives us an inkling of what Franco's new "Hispanidad" penetration will mean for democracy in the Western Hemisphere.

Furthermore, recognition of Franco is entirely inconsistent with the "Stop-Hitler" policy which has been exhibited by the Administration recently, and which has the backing of 95 per cent of the American people. How is it possible for us not to recognize Hitler's seizure of Czecho-Slovakia, and in the same month turn around and give sanction to the Hitler-Mussolini "protectorate" in Spain?

We place an embargo on goods to democratic Spain when it is struggling against world Fascist aggression; when that aggression has succeeded we lift the embargo so as to supply Fascist Spain with equipment that may be used against South Amerima and ultimately the United States.

The present attempts to change our neutrality legislation so as to cut off aid to the aggressors and help the victims of aggression is the only policy that can prevent a world war in which we would be involved. Recognition of Franco and lifting the embargo at this time has exactly the opposite effect. It aids Fascist conquest and strikes a blow at all peoples who are endeavoring to maintain peace.

"What Next?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: And now a pedestrian, because he did the natural thing of reprimanding a motorist for attempting to run him down, is attacked by the motorist with a dangerous weapon and severely injured. What next? It is difficult to find words in the English language to adequately express the disgust and contempt that most of us must feel toward this type of criminal.

The sooner society can rid itself of this cowardly type, as well as the almost as bad hit-and-runner, the sooner we will be able to feel a greater sense of security when it becomes necessary for us to use our public thoroughfares. It is indeed difficult to understand by what method of reasoning any motorist can assume that monarch-of-all-he surveys attitude as soon as he seats himself back of the steering wheel to such an extent that it is his right or privilege to run down or assault any one who may get in his way.

It is not unreasonable to believe that this despicable type may some day attempt an assault on some one who will be prepared to receive him.

Not Guns, But Lives

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Great Britain Prepares," in The Post of March 31 interested me greatly. However, I disagree with your facts and conclusions about 100 per cent.

Great Britain did not adopt conscription in January, 1916, for any of the reasons you state. Following the successful recruiting of "Kitchener's Army," which army was largely in action or ready to go into action by January, 1917, worth-while recruiting fell off to such an alarming extent that the War Ministry was forced to draft men—compel them to go to war.

This state of affairs was duplicated in the Dominions—Canada was forced into conscription in 1917. Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and the other British possessions found it equally difficult to get volunteers.

One must realize that from August, 1914, until January, 1917, the best young blood of Great Britain and Ireland and the Dominions had been poured out on Flanders fields and blood (man power) was a scarce commodity—it had to be drafted.

You write of only 100,000 men available for "the continent" in August, 1914—do you not know that Canada alone had 40,000 men trained (reservists largely) and in camp in August, 1914, ready and eager to go to "the continent" in aid of the Motherland?

All too often writers of today are inclined to prattle of war in terms of guns, planes, ships, gasses, appropriations, etc. Let us write and talk of war in terms of blood, blood, blood and more blood—shattered lives, desolate homes (Gold Star Mothers, we called them)—a land denuded of its youth because of the insatiable appetite of the god Mars. Let us face facts.

War clouds hang low today and darken our thoughts. We should be prepared to defend our beloved country and we are not; spiritually, physically and economically we were never so weak.

If we had statesmen on Capitol Hill instead of politicians this situation could be remedied in short order.

Thieves, Please Note

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Yesterday while visiting in your city I had the harrowing experience of someone breaking into my car while parked in the 1400 block, C street northwest. I had left the car for about an hour when I returned and saw the terrible shape the thieves had left the inside of the car, stealing two princess laces, valued at $75 each, one hand-crocheted lace alb belonging to a friend who had put two years' work on the lace alone, and a 3-yard piece of antique filet lace insertion, valued at $20, and a French camera valued at $35.

The police have a report of this incident, but I am writing you in an effort to appeal to the culprits to please return the laces and camera, as they do not belong to the owner of the car, and I am responsible for them. This thievery took place between 7 and 8:15 p. m.

Peg's View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding th. "old war horses" of the civil service: If these well-intentioned women of uncertain age read the woman's page in the daily newspaper and the various magazines on the market, they would learn how necessary it is for the business woman to keep herself well groomed, neatly dressed and young in appearance

No man wants a dowdy-looking secretary, no matter how intelligent she may be. It requires more than brains to be a "perfect secretary"—a pleasant disposition, tact, ability to meet the public and a neat, attractive set-up are every bit as important as efficiency in stenography and typing!

The Post Impressionist

Going, Going, Gone

NOWHERE in literature do I know of a description of an old-fashioned country auction, though there must be a good one tucked away in some English or American georgic, essay, or novel. I hope I shall be apprised of my literary ignorance as soon as these sentences are off the press; and I shall be all auction ears!

In many parts of our land the auction was, and surely still is, an institution. It was a social event as well as an item of business. It was a chance for the farm neighbors to get together and chew the rag; to gather news and gossip; maybe to do a little swapping on the side. It was something of a holiday.

"Henry C. Wilcox," the notice would read, "will sell at public auction on Saturday, the 15th of March, at his farm on the North road, the following: 10 head of Holstein cattle, 2 work horses, 1 yearling colt, 1 brood sow, 5 shotes, 50 Plymouth Rock hens; 1 mowing machine, 1 McCormick reaper, 1 side-delivery hay-rake, 1 manure spreader, and a large assortment of other farm machinery, all in good condition; about 20 tons of timothy hay; household goods, including beds, tables, dressers, chairs, dishes; 1 cream separator; 1 incubator; 10 cords of wood, and many other items of farm equipment too numerous to mention. Everything must be sold, as the owner is moving away. Come to this unusual sale. Ed Dye, auctioneer. Doughnuts and coffee will be served at noon."

Well do I remember one such auction I attended when I was about 14. It was a cold March day, a sharp wind blowing off Lake Erie. My father announced at breakfast that he reckoned he'd go to the Congdon auction, and did I want to go along or stay home and sprout potatoes? Although I did not care much about the latter, neither did I anticipate riding those miles by horse and buggy over the rutty, frozen country roads. But an hour or so after my father had left, driving our only fast horse, I made one of the foolishest decisions of my life—I determined to go to the auction, after all; but I don't know to this day just what impelled me to ride—bareback except for a mere blanket—one of our workhorses, Flora by name, who certainly was a lineal descendant of one of those "creeping things" mentioned in the Book of Genesis.

It was as new an experience for the horse as it was for me, and though I was sorry for my decision before we had reached Cemetery Hill; I think Flora's regrets antedated mine. After I had seduced her into a half-hearted trot, it became evident that that was not really the gait best suited to my tender horsemanship. It was best that she walk—just walk. And so it was noon before we arrived at the auction—I cold and sore, and Flora a little malicious.

I parked Flora by a hay-mow and made for the house to get warm. The coffee and doughnuts helped a lot.

"How in the world did you get here?" my father asked.

"Horseback," I replied as nonchalantly as the circumstances allowed.

The sale had evidently started with the house stuff, and the auctioneer was in a hurry to get outdoors. He was lumping things together in great style. Dishpans with books, teacups with bric-a-brac. Somebody had just bought an old organ and was picking out a wheezy tune. And then, ye gods! How did that get in a place like this—a tennis racket? I'd been craving a tennis racket for months. And this was a pretty good one. I remember that these people had a boy who had gone away to school.

"How much am I offered for this tennis racket, this-here carpet sweeper, and these oil lamps? H'much'm I bid? Fifty cents I'm bid. One half a dollar."

Great day, how I wanted that racket! But I had not one red copper, and as my father had gone out to look over the livestock there was no help to be had from him. Somebody bid a dollar, then a dollar and a quarter, finally a dollar and a half. And there I stood, almost crying, and saw the racket, the lamps and the damned carpet sweeper all sold for $1.50 to Martin Mosher, who had no earthly use for any of them, but who would store them away in his junk shop and make a pretty profit on them in some future deal.

Such were the puny heartbreaks of country auctions. The real heartbreaks were often those of the family that was selling out. Perhaps they were moving out to Kansas or California. It wasn't so much that things went for a song, but that they had to be sold at all; the little things that a person had lived with ever since he could remember—the brown carpet with the daisies on it, or the picture that hung at the head of the stairs. An auction was almost as bad as a fire to have to happen to a family.

When bankruptcies, deaths, or "movings away" were the causes, the auctions were apt to be a little sad, but not all of them were. There was plenty of banter floating around. There was the auctioneer's stock of jokes. ("Boy, ain't he a corker!") There was always the relaxation of a day off from work; it was almost as good as a picnic. And there was the pleasure of curiosity satisfied—of seeing a little into other people's affairs, what they owned and how they lived, who bought what at how much, and who got stung.

I returned home, I might add, the same way I went—horseback, deigning not to ride in the buggy, and let Flora trail behind. I did not feel very spry for several days, but no one said anything. I vowed I would never ride a horse again, and the only time I ever broke that promise the beast threw me off into a nest of cobblestones in a none too salubrious barnyard. Served me right.

Some day, though, I wouldn't mind going back to another country auction, even without a cent in my pocket. I won't want to buy anything. I'll just look and listen, and at noon eat with a great deal of relish my doughnuts and coffee.

Philippine Independence

NO OTHER AMERICAN is better qualified to have written "The Philippine Problem" (Putnam, $3). Maj. William H. Anderson has spent 40 years of an active life in the Philippines, first as a soldier and later in business. These 40 years cover virtually the entire period of American occupation. The author knows the islands and their peoples with an intimacy and thoroughness that could only come from long residence among them.

Those who expect to find an apology for our fling at imperialism in the Orient should not read this book. For it is a forthright bill of particulars against what is probably the most inept venture ever undertaken by the United States. The pity is that it probably comes too late to do any good, a fact which Maj. Anderson himself is quick to recognize. For the Tydings-McGuffie Act provides for turning the Philippines loose in 1946, at which time Japan will doubtless start in where we leave off. Maj. Anderson believes we should make a clean break when that time comes, and not perpetuate a military and economic protectorate from which only the Filipinos would profit.

After the first martial frenzy over Dewey's victory in Manila Bay, the American people quickly relapsed into indifference about the Philippines. They never became empire-minded, as did the Dutch and English, and the loss of our great Far Eastern colony will scarcely create a ripple in the public consciousness. Full of missionary zeal, we undertook to Americanize the culture of an Asiatic people whose traditions were foreign to nearly everything on which American civilization is built. At least the Filipinos are better off for our altruism, particularly in the field of literacy and public health.

And by bounties and tariff favors we have made them the favored people of the Orient, usually at the expense of the American taxpayer and American industry. But we have not made them a democracy, and, in spite of Douglas McArthur's shiny new army, we have not made them ready for independence. They have been too pampered by American paternalism to be able to stand on their own feet in a wolfish world.

OUR PHILIPPINE POLICY has never been consistent for long. It has vacillated between half-hearted efforts at conventional imperialism and the promotion of Philippine nationalism—between Leonard Wood and Francis Burton Harrison. Only the native politicos have been consistent. They have long since gained full control of the insular administration. They have clamored successfully for independence, but are now panicky at the prospect of full freedom with all its terrifying implications and possibilities.

They want independence with guarantees against foreign aggression, and the assurance of free trade in the vital American market. Otherwise, they want a continuation of the anomalous relationship whereby they have all the authority of government and the full usufruct of their resources, while we have the responsibility for their protection and their prosperity. Thanks to our sentimental benevolence, they would eat their cake and have it.

Maj. Anderson has performed a notable public service in bringing to the easy-going American people a realistic picture of their own delusion. This unusually honest book should be read and pondered by every member of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs and of the House Committee on Insular Affairs. For it is the first time that our Philippine problem has been analyzed with such authority and candor.

Vic Hurley's "Jungle Patrol" (Dutton, $3.50) is the story of the Philippine constabulary, which early took over from the Regular Army the patrolling of the vast island reaches of jungle and mountain that extend from Cape Engano down beyond Zamboanga and Sulu to the edges of the Celebes Sea. In some of the islands insurrection was chronic for many years and eternal vigilance was literally the price of one's neck. The privates of this remarkable body were Filipinos; their officers were Americans, though natives gradually supplanted the American officers who led the corps in the early years of the century. The constabulary operated in small detachments, without a mobile commissariat or other supply service.

At first it was armed only with old Spanish single-fire shotguns and then with discarded black powder rifles. It was only long afterward that a suspicious and niggardly government agreed to arm the force with smokeless repeating rifles. The constabulary took no account of odds. Rushed by overwhelming numbers of pulajanes or Moros, they depended on the effects of their first volley. If the enemy still came on, they fought with the cold steel whose use they knew so well. They stormed Moro strongholds on Mindanao with a dash and abandon and cold finality rare in the annals of war.

The Americans who officered these redoubtable little brown fighters—Allen, Crockett, Grove, Knauber, Bandholtz, Taylor, Garwood, Tiffany, and the rest—were a veritable breed of paladins. The story of Leonard Furlong, who always sailed his campaign hat over the walls of a Moro fort before he led his men to the assault, is typical of their flair for battle.

Vic Hurley has performed a great service from oblivion this saga of American valor.

The Carpathian Barrier

From "The London Economist"

Germany And Rumanian Oil

IN THE SITUATION created in eastern Europe by the downfall of Czecho-Slovakia the mountain system of the Carpathians is a strategic factor of paramount importance. The Carpathians cannot compare with the Alps in elevation—they nowhere pass the height of 9,000 feet—but they are broad and extremely rugged; and they have been much less broken in by engineering.

Economically they form no serious barrier, for there is no longer any obstruction of shipping on the Danube at the Iron Gates, and there are several railways through the passes. But for the operations of a big modern army in a major war the range would be a most formidable impediment, and even for a force with free passage through its defiles it would pose a difficult problem of communications. Any power engaging in large-scale warfare on the other side of such a mountain range from its bases of supply would be at a serious disadvantage.

IN EFFECT this means that Germany, having absorbed Austria and obtained a stranglehold on Czecho-Slovakia, has now a strategic ascendancy over the lands within the Carpathian arc—that is to say, the territories of the old Kingdom of Hungary, including Transylvania—but that the Soviet Union retains a corresponding strategic ascendancy over Old Rumania (Wallachia and Moldavia), which lies outside the arc and far away from the Silesian frontier of Germany.

This natural partition of spheres of power might form a basis for a mutually satisfactory compromise between Germany and Russia were it not for the fact that the great Rumanian oil field, the only big source of natural oil supply in Europe to the west of the Soviet Union, is in Old Rumania, which is on the wrong side of the Carpathians from Germany's point of view. The oil-bearing belt stretches round the most easterly corner of the range with its center at Ploesti to the north of Bucharest.

IT IS CLEAR that in wartime this oil field would be of vital importance to Germany, unless she was assured of supplies either from Russia or from outside Europe. It appears to be the general opinion of experts that Germany's own production of oil from coal could not suffice for her needs in a major war of any duration. Thus the alignment of Rumania in the event of a European war might be decisive in its effect, but her very capactiy for granting or withholding vital supplies to Germany would involve her in grave dangers.

If she withheld oil, she would risk a German invasion; if she supplied it and if Russia were a belligerent against Germany, she would have to reckon with a Russian attempt to cut off the traffic. In either case, Rumania would become a storm center, and in either case, because of the orographical factor, the strategic position would be unfavorable to Germany.

Grave Strategic Difficulties Cited

IF RUMANIA were hostile to Germany and it became a necessity for Germany to seize the Rumanian oil wells, the campaign would be one of great difficulty.

Assuming that the Germans were given passage through Hungary and were assisted by a Hungarian army, they would doubtless succeed in overrunning Transylvania, but they would then be faced with the task of forcing the Carpathian passes into Wallachia, and it is very unlikely that they would be able to repeat the enveloping movement by which they won their victories over Rumania in 1916.

Then both Turkey and Bulgaria were allies of the central powers, and thus it was possible for Germany to attack Rumania from the south; Mackensen, with a mixed army of Germans and Bulgars, crossed the Danube from Bulgaria while Falkenhayn pressed on the Carpathian passes from the side of Transylvania.

Of the passes, only one, the Vulkan, was forced by the Germans coming from Transylvania; the rest were rendered untenable by Mackensen's drive against their defenders' rear.

Such strategy, however, requires an alliance with Bulgaria, and it is improbable that Germany will in future be able to obtain this alliance—except after very decisive victories in the opening stages of a war—because of the new conditions created by the Balkan Pact. Bulgaria might be only too willing to join Germany in an attack on Rumania in order to recover her irredenta in the Dobrudja, but she would almost certainly be deterred by the superior military power of Turkey. Turkey, resolved to maintain an absolute independence in world affairs and to resist a German hegemony in the Balkans, could make a most important intervention in a European war merely by securing Rumania against attack from Bulgaria, and in the circumstances here contemplated there is good reason for believing that she would act in this way.

Without the possibility of an offensive from the south the Germans would have to force the Carpathian passes by frontal attack, and if they succeeded in this they would then have to occupy a large territory on the further side of the mountains and hold it against the counter-offensive of a Russian army in Odessa. The forcing of the passes would certainly be no easy matter if the Rumanians were supported by Russian artillery and aircraft. But even if the passes were lost, the invaders would be at a great disadvantage for fighting in the Wallachian plain, for the Russian mechanized columns could operate without any obstruction except that presented by the rivers, whereas every German tank, lorry and big gun must come over the hairpin bends of the few Carpathian mountain roads and railways.

Hungary's Role A Real Factor

THE SAME considerations would apply, though, of course, in a lesser degree, if Rumania were not hostile but friendly to Germany and were resolved to resist any coercion from Russia. The bottle necks of the Carpathian passes would make it very difficult for Germany to deploy a large army in Moldavia and Bessarabia to defend Rumania against a Russian invasion across the Dniester. If the Russians chose to concentrate their main strength on this front, they would have good prospects of capturing the oil well area, and large German forces would be pinned down to battle under most unfavorable conditions.

The most effective way for Germany to reinforce a pro-German Rumania against a Russian invasion would be by use of the Danube. The warship flotilla which the Germans are building on the Danube, together with the Breslau-Vienna highway and the Oder-Danube-Canal now to be constructed through Czecho-Slovakia, will certainly give Germany a great capacity for utilizing the river for strategic purposes.

However, part of the course of the Danube lies within the borders of Yugoslavia, and even if that country could be induced to grant passage to German gunboats and transports, such an encroachment on Yugoslav independence might put a severe strain on the Rome-Berlin axis. So far the axis has shown an impressive solidity on account of the Spanish issue; but in the long run Italo-German partnership is conditional on Germany's willingness to keep away from the Adriatic, and if this sine qua non is to be observed, Yugoslavia must be left as a bluffer state.

APART FROM complications over Yugoslavia, Germany runs the risk of alienating Hungary by friendship with Rumania. Politically the Nazis have two great assets for their relations with Rumania—anti-Semitism and the fear of Bolshevism in the Rumanian ruling class. But neither of these assets is quite what it was; the glamour of Jew-baiting has been considerably diminished by the disastrous Goga experiment and many Rumanians in high places are convinced by now that Stalin does not desire to rekindle the fires of the October revolution either in Rumania or elsewhere.

The shooting of Codreanu and the other Iron Guard leaders by their guards while they were trying to escape led to an outburst of abuse in the German press against the present Rumanian regime which reveals all too clearly what hopes Germany was banking on an Iron Guard revolution.

The Farmer And Politics

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Farm Vote

A MAP which poses some important political questions has been prepared recently by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture. The map itself is purely economic. It shows, State by State, the purchasing power of farm cash income in 1938 compared with 1929. It is based on the cash receipts from the sale of principal farm products, including payments by the Government, divided by the index of prices paid by farmers for the commodities used in living and farm production, including interest and taxes.

CURIOUSLY, in view of all that has been said about the farm depression, there were 22 States in which the purchasing power of farmers was greater in 1938 than in 1929. Among them were such important farm States as Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois.

The map becomes interesting politically when it is compared with what is known about the behavior of the farm vote in the 1938 election. According to a study made by a New Deal analyst, the shift from the Democratic to the Republican Party among farmers in 1938 was greater in Michigan than in any other Midwestern State. Yet, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, farm buying power in Michigan was 12.6 per cent higher in 1938 than in 1929.

Shift To G. O. P. Despite Gains

IN OHIO farm buying power in 1938 was 17.4 per cent above 1929; but there was an anti-New Deal wave among the farmers.

In Minnesota, farm buying power was 1.3 per cent above 1929; in Wisconsin, 2.4 per cent; in Indiana, 13.1, and in Pennsylvania, 9.4. In all of these the 1938 election brought a decided Republican trend, which included in greater or less degree the farmers.

Among the States in which farm buying power was the lowest in relation to 1929 were: Nebraska, 55.5 per cent of 1929; North Dakota, 60.1 per cent, and Kansas, 67.3. In Nebraska the Democrats re-elected a Governor; in Kansas the Republicans made impressive gains.

In Iowa, where farm buying power in 1938 was 97.5 per cent of 1929, the Republicans made gains; but the shift from Democrats to Republicans (from 1936 to 1938) in the purely rural townships was small. There was a sharp falling off, however, in the total vote in these strictly rural townships—sharper than in the vote of the State as a whole.

The sum of all this is that there seems not to have been much relationship between the economic condition of farmers and the way they voted in 1938.

A Republican trend set in in the rural areas of the West Central States in 1936—in some of them, in 1934. It was covered up by his over-all pluralities, but Franklin D. Roosevelt did less well in 1936 than in 1932 in 74 per cent of the rural counties of Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Kansas. He also lost ground in 76 per cent of the rural counties of the border States of Minnesota, Oklahoma, Kentucky, Maryland, Tennessee and West Virginia. Those are Emil Hurja's figures.

New Deal Opposed In Small Towns

OF COURSE, in 1936, the Republicans went to the west central region, Kansas, for their candidate and, conspicuously reversing their policies of 16 years, offered the farmers a handsome set of promises, with subsidies even greater than those the Roosevelt Administration was then paying. There were good reasons, therefore, why the traditionally Republican Midwestern farmers should feel that they could safely return to the Republican fold.

But on the whole there seems to have been less of a Republican trend in the Presidential election of 1936 among the strictly farm voters than among the small-town voters. And scattered samplings indicate this was true also in 1938 in several of the important agricultural States.

The point cannot be proved. But, after examining 1936 and 1938 election returns, political analysts in the agricultural wing of the Administration assert:

1. That despite the troubles of the farm program, the farmers are more loyal to the Roosevelt Administration than are their small-town brethren; and

2. That the anti-Democratic trend in the rural areas (including small towns as well as farms) has been due less to the farm program than to other phases of the New Deal.

At the top of the list of complaints about the New Deal they would put WPA, unbalanced budgets, and association with the C. I. O., whose militant tactics, especially during 1937, distressed middle-class and farmers' feelings.

If this analysis is correct, the Roosevelt Administration's efforts to help the farmers are still a valuable political asset and the man whose name is most closely identified with them—Henry A. Wallace—cannot be written off the list of influential people whose views and aspirations must be considered in the 1940 election.

Chamberlain And Alice

THERE IS a reason why "Alice in Wonderland" is pre-eminently the English classic. It is a tender and humorous glorification of the age of innocence.

Alice is the very-well-brought-up, polite and extremely reasonable English child who finds herself in a world full of unreasonable foreigners—a world where the bottles labeled "drink me" are not marked "poison," the way all bottles in the nursery medicine closet ought to be, and which, nevertheless, when you drink their contents, "shut you up like a telescope."

If the bottle had only been decently marked, as a proper English bottle would have been, Alice would not have drunk it, "for she had read several nice little stories about children who had got burnt and eaten up by wild beasts and other unpleasant things, all because they would not remember the simple rules their friends had taught them—such as that a red-hot poker would burn you if you hold it too long, and that if you cut your finger very deeply with a knife it generally bleeds, and she had never forgotten that if you drink much from a bottle marked "poison" it is almost certain to disagree with you sooner or later.

Alice Drinks, Becomes Very Much Smaller

HOWEVER, as you remember, this bottle was not marked "poison," so Alice ventured to taste it, and, finding it very nice (it had, in fact, a sort of mixed flavor of cherry tart, custard, pineapple, roast turkey, toffee and hot buttered toast) she very soon finished it all."

Now, what happened to Alice after that was that she became only a fraction of her former size, and since this sudden diminution made it impossible for her to do some of the things she very much wanted to do, she sat down and cried. But being a well-brought-up little English child, she took herself severely to task, saying, "There is no use crying like that!"

And we learn that Alice was in the habit of scolding herself and even sometimes of boxing her own ears for having cheated herself in a game of croquet she was playing against herself, for this curious child was very fond of pretending to be two people. "But it's no use now," thought poor Alice, "to pretend to be two people! Why, there's hardly enough of me left to make one respectable person!"

And you remember that, pulling herself together and seeing a box marked "eat me," Alice figured that she might as well eat it, "for if it makes me grow larger I can reach the key, and if it makes me grow smaller I can creep under the door. So either way I can get into the garden."

Chamberlain Followed "Drink Me" Policy

FOR THOSE who find it difficult to understand Mr. Chamberlain I recommended a re-reading of the English classic.

Mr. Chamberlain followed the "drink me" policy at Munich, and the "eat me" policy in the House of Commons last week and this.

It is called the muddling-through policy, when translated into political terms, and is totally understandable to anything except an English mind. It is a combination of reasonability without reasoning.

It has its uses in English statesmen. I use the word "English" advisedly. It is certainly not Scottish. And it is, above all, not Welsh or Irish. One can perfectly imagine Mr. Chamberlain at six as the masculine twin of Alice. One cannot imagine Mr. Lloyd George as anything but a very distant relative. Its usefulness is that the qualities of Alice—her niceness, her reasonability and her incredible foolishness—attract the English people.

If Alice makes a mistake it is because of her innocence, because she is really much too nice to live in a world full of falsely labeled bottles and boxes, perverted nursery rhymes, vicious old Father Williamses and ugly duchesses. She is confused and misled, but in the end it all turns out to be a nightmare.

That's nursery rhymes, vicious old father, etc. . . .

And she wakes up in her secure nursery, comforted by her tea, recalling the shriek of the gryphon, the choking of the suppressed guinea pigs and the distant sob of the miserable mock turtle as a fantastic experience.

Yes, Alice is beloved by England because of her unconquerable simplicity.

Chamberlain's Blunders Make Him Stronger

AND SO, strange as it may seem to any type of mind except the English, it is extremely probable that Mr. Chamberlain is stronger in his leadership because he turned out to be wrong than he would have been had he always been right.

At any rate, as the result of making incredible blunders, one has Monday's spectacle in the House of Commons, where an entire nation, from the Labor opposition to the most Bourbon tories, is united behind the prototype of Alice.

Perhaps this uncoerced unity, which has been convinced not by using its reason but purely empirically, will turn out to be of more importance to history than all the lost strategical bases. Perhaps, to quote another English poet, there is some method in his madness. For mad it certainly appears to be.

The nation which was not prepared to defend Czecho-Slovakia, a country which had meticulously kept all of its international engagements, is now prepared to defend Poland, a country which has pursued a most dubious diplomatic course and which is at least as difficult to defend.

Some will look for every explanation except the simple one. But I am inclined to believe that the simple explanation is the true one.

It is very difficult to believe that when Chamberlain went to Munich he did not know that he was giving Hitler a free hand in the east and that he did not know exactly what giving that free hand would mean. But since Mr. Chamberlain is English it is possible that he really thought that Hitler would behave like an Englishman, take what he wanted in such a way as not to shock and horrify the world and stop at the right moment.

I doubt whether Mr. Chamberlain has ever in his life met anybody who was not either just a gentleman or a "gentleman in trade." But Hitler is neither a gentleman nor a trader.

Hitler's Method, Speed Convert Chamberlain

I AM inclined to believe that when Mr. Chamberlain said on the eve of Munich, "If I were convinced that any nation had made up its mind to dominate the world by fear of its force, I should feel that it must be resisted," he meant it—but didn't believe. Since then he has come to believe.

What has made him believe has been the method of Hitler. What has made him believe is the speed of Hitler.

If Chamberlain had ever read "Mein Kampf"—which I am sure he has not done—he might have been aware a long time ago. But being English, even that is doubtful. For the English mind only believes what it sees. It believes in the event, not in the plan.

And the German mind has its equal weakness. It believes in the plan and fails to observe the events.

That is perhaps one reason Germany won all the first battles but lost the last war. It is not written in history that this will always be so, but it is curious that Hitler, who prides himself on having invented something absolutely new in diplomacy and who attacked Wilhelm's Germany for its idiocy in making an enemy of England and Russia at the same time, has managed to repeat Wilhelm's mistakes.

Radio Interview With A Lost-Treasure Hunter

Message: Jimmy Walker, somewhere off the Carolina coast:

How're ya doin'?

Answer: Not certain. No question, however, that there is a big roll out here. Oh, for the days when people could find it on dry land!

Message: Are you personally hunting for this lost treasure, or is it a corporation affair?

Answer: You know very well that corporations have more trouble getting any money these days than individuals. Haven't found anything yet. Big flock of gulls off starboard bow but captain says they have no fi[illegible] sense, so guess it does[illegible]mean anything.

Message: How [illegible] you hear about this lost vessel with its vast treasure aboard?

Answer: For the last ten years have I had anything else to do but sit around and listen to stories?

Message: Any luck yet?

Answer: Had a nibble a while ago, but it didn't feel like a gold bar. Rather disappointed with life of a treasure hunter. Don't feel that I am dressed for it.

Message: How long do you expect to continue the hunt for lost gold?

Answer: If it gets any rougher you can have all the gold in the ocean. And I'll throw in the silver, too.

Message: Unconfirmed wireless report that you located sunken ship a few hours ago. Please confirm.

Answer: Thought we were over sunken ship, but found we were under it. Boy, is it rough out here!

Message: Do you really count on finding sunken treasure?

Answer: No, but it's more fun than playing the Irish Sweepstakes.

Message: How do you tell when you are over gold or silver? How does this radio activity invention work?

Answer: I don't know; I'm a stranger here myself.

Communication was cut off at this point due to some unexplained trouble. After several hours, contact with the ex-mayor was made again in a message asking, "Found any treasure yet?"

Answer: No. Now having family argument over question whether I brought my brothers here or they brought me. Think we are using wrong bait. Jimmy.

And Not An Amateur Among 'Em

Talking traffic signals are now being proposed for New York. This department is agin 'em. Where would they get against a city of expert and chronic talker-backers?

Mirrors will be put in the subway car of tomorrow. They have been in demand for years by people who wanted to see their bruises while they were still fresh.

Horse racing in New Jersey with mutuels is almost certain and the rush of New Yorkers anxious to get away from the sordid, old-fashioned, never-give-a-sucker-an-even-break atmosphere of the New York tracks would be terrific. For one thing, it will mean an escape from the bookies who operate in the grandstands among women and strangers, giving them 7 to 5 on a horse quoted downstairs at 5 to 1.

Add similes: as due for a surprise as the fellow who visits the World's Fair believing the statements that nudity won't be emphasized.

P. L. K. insists he asked a Bronx policeman how to get to the World's Fair, by the way, and got the answer: "All I know is that it's somewhere in California."

Mexico Expels 3 Fascists as Club Is Stoned

'Inspector' From Spain And Aides Center of Workers' Rioting

By the United Press.

Mexico City, April 4.—President Cardenas, acting swiftly after anti-nationalist rioting had broken out in front of the Casino Espanol, chief Spanish club in Mexico, tonight ordered deportation of thre Spanish Phalanx (fascist) leaders.

The President's order was announced by the department of interior shortly after the Casino's windows were shattered by a volley of stones thrown by groups of workers who drove to the building in taxicabs.

To Leave on First Boat

The expulsion order named Alejandro Villanueva, described as the inspector general of the Spanish Phalanx, and Jose Celorio Ortega and Genaro Riestra, said to be Villanueva's chief aides.

The three were ordered deported, the announcement said, "in view of their political activities carried out in the country in flagrant violation of our laws." Their presence in Mexico, it was said, was considered "inconvenient."

Villanueva, who is on an inspection tour of phalanx units in Latin America, recently came here from Havana. He and his two companions were expected to be taken to Vera Cruz and shipped out of the country on the first boat.

Riot in Busines Center

The rioting and subsequent expulsion order followed a demand by El Popular, organ of the Mexican Workers Confederation, in a special 6 p. m. edition for dissolution of the Phalanx, which, the newspaper said, has a membership of 40,000 in Mexico. The disorders, apparently inspired by the newspaper article, occurred on Isabel la Catolica street, in the center of the busines district.

The Phalanx formed an important part of Gen. Franco's nationalist movement in the Spanish civil war.

D. C. Man Stabbed, Woman Arrested

Stabbed in the chest with a butcher knife, William Plummer, 48, told police at Emergency Hospital yesterday that his 38-year-old woman companion was responsible for his wound.

He was found unconscious in a rooming house in the 1300 block of Rhode Island avenue northwest early yesterday by the manager of the house. Police took into custody a 38-year-old woman, in whose apartment Plummer was found. No charges were lodged against her and she will be held pending the outcome of Plummer's injury.

Poles Already in Grip of Nazi Pincers, Says Gen. Sikorski

Poland

mania and Germany furnish the latter with the much-desired fuel and improve, without completely solving, the difficulties of the disastrous conditions in which she has placed herself in this respect.

But the military situation of Poland also has been aggravated directly. By accepting the convention of March 24, Slovakia has virtually lost her independence. With time, she will be transformed into a powerful stronghold of the Third Reich. Her joint frontier with Poland is to be fortified. She will therefore serve the Germans as a marching base and also for the protection of the flanks of their army in its progress toward the conquest of the east and southeast of Europe.

By seizing Memel and exercising pressure upon Lithuania, Berlin is trying to encircle Poland from the north. The Polish state is already being gripped by the German pincers. This is for Poland a matter of serious concern.

From the point of view of war material, the Germans obtained from Bohemia an equipment for 40 divisions, more than 1,000 tanks and 1,000 airplanes. The Czech heavy industry, the coal, iron, lead and silver mines, and also the Czech agriculture and livestock enable Germany to constitute numerous reserves.

Preparing for Long War

Thus it can be said that during the last two years the Third Reich has considerably increased its war potential from the strategical, material, territorial and demographic standpoint (a gain of 200,000 square kilometers and of 20,000,000 inhabitants).

It seems that Germany has realized that the theory of the short and annihiliating war is merely a legend and that she is now preparing for a long war for the conquest of the world. The first episode of this war will have been the entry of the German divisions in Prague, and that day Hitler exposed himself to a public accusation of perjury in so far as he denied the principle of the "national state" and replaced it by a new slogan—"the holy empire."

It would be surprising if this did not cause Mussolini to reflect.

But what is the real situation? From this moment Germany, as prey to certain internal difficulties, is no longer a nationally united state. But modern war, as already proved in 1914, has also a moral aspect and includes a struggle of moral forces.

In this respect the German occupation of Bohemia amounts to a disregard of these forces which may have serious consequences. The Czechs—obstinate, ardent, tenacious and patriotic Slavs—will never bow to the German yoke of their own free will in the event of war. They will not be a factor of power but a factor of dissolution.

And what about the other states born of the peace treaties? For them the march of events will depend upon the great powers. Who sow, reap—they will have the Europe they deserve. But what holds good for the great powers also applies to the large and small states between Soviet Russia, Germany and Italy.

Tempting Prey for Reich

These states, which are of about the same age and were Christianized at roughly the same date, have as little affinity with Soviet Russia as with Germany. In reality—and this fact is not yet completely realized in France and in Great Britain—these countries are the naturally and destined allies of the western powers.

But they are a tempting prey for Germany. There can be no doubt that if the Third Reich were assured of impunity it would not hesitate to subject each of these countries to the fate of Czecho-Slovakia. Pretexts are not lacking.

For Soviet Russia, on the other hand, these states form an ideal fortress, a possible battle field.

For the western democracies this region will be merely the field on which their own security and the sole remaining chances of peace in Europe will be staked. Whether a short or a long term process, this will be a question of life and death for East and West.

Once in possession of reserves permitting of a long-drawn-out war, Germany will become a mortal danger for all her neighbors. If she is now to be allowed to progress in this direction war will be inevitable owing to the formidable increase of armaments due to the international tension. For imperial competition for the armaments race it is well known that there is only one issue—war.

It is also common knowledge that any outside attempt to prevent Germany from extending her domination to the center and east of Europe will be immediately followed by a protest against encirclement.

There is nothing for the great powers to do except to decide upon a radical transformation of their methods. They must lay down immediately the principles of effective international collaboration, together with the necessary measures of security and defense.

Defensive Bloc Necessary

In other words, for peace, and not only for defense, the association of the great powers and of the states of central and eastern Europe who wish to retain their independence must organize the material, economic and financial conditions to preserve their life.

As a matter of fact, a union or bloc for purposes of mutual defense will only be really effective if constituting not merely an economic association closed to any state that may prove altogether too dynamic, but an organization prepared to admit any candidate proposing to cooperate.

Whilst awaiting such a consummation, which it is to be hoped may be less remote than it seems at present, the measures of defense envisaged by the powers must be elaborated with a full knowledge of facts.

This pacific defensive front which appears to be desired by the democratic powers must be constituted with the greatest discernment. The newly restored states of central and eastern Europe are fully justified in guarding themselves, both east and west. They have repeatedly declared that they will not tolerate the use of their territories for the passage of either of the armies of their powerful neighbors.

For the moment the actual menace appears to come from Germany. It would be sufficient if the Eastern powers were assured that any attack from this side would result in a joint action of all the powers against the aggressor to allow them to defend themselves, arms in hand, up to the last extremity.

For Poland the situation is clear. She will not fail in her task. Like others, the Polish nation has its faults. But it has also a great virtue—an ardent and conscientious patriotism. This is proved by the numerous spontaneous manifestations today.

The Poles will defend their country up to their last drop of blood. And this will to fight has always been and still is the essential condition of the military value of a nation. With their strong and reliable army the Polish people will defend themselves in any circumstances, even if forced to face the enemy alone.

Their determination may nonetheless be the beginning of a general conflagration; but however this may be, Poland will remain true to her glorious military traditions. And in defending the integrity of her own soil she will adhere at her own moment to the camp of those who fight for the preservation of peace and liberty.

Soviet Russia, who, for her part, may have her hands full with Japan in the case of a world conflict (this is the opinion of the author and his friends) would at that moment be able to afford useful aid by supplying various primary materials and armaments. Generally speaking, friendly neutrality and the possibility of getting war and other supplies are most important.

The question of the collaboration of the Russian air force, the best arm of the Soviet army, might be taken into consideration. This would be the maximum that the neighbors of Soviet Russia would wish to obtain from her. They do not desire to be exposed to the menace of bolshevization, supported by the Red army, which is still the vanguard of world revolution, and it is all that the western powers can ask of a country which has no common frontier with the Reich.

This solution would allow the states menaced by a German invasion to oppose a real force supported by the numbers and the strength of Russia. But it is useless to rely upon the Soviet Union for a large-scale offensive. Her masses are powerful, but too inert.

Only in the case of a desperate situation and the total invasion of Poland would it be possible to call upon the direct co-operation of Soviet Russia. But if such a moment were to come one would have to look to the imminent destruction of mankind by collective madness.

Russians Doubt Britain

Moscow, April 4 (AP).—Soviet Press comment today indicated an absence of faith in the sincerity of British-French efforts to form an anti-aggression bloc against Germany.

The Bolshevik, a Moscow periodical, said that "in London and Paris they still think that Fascist aggression can be diverted—and even that it is being diverted—against the Soviet Union."

It was asserted in reliable quarters, however, that it would be wrong to assume from such comment that the Soviet government refused to associate itself with any peace project involving Poland. It was stressed that it is "Col. Beck's Poland" which is distrusted here.

Citizens Back Bill for D. C. Civil Service

Columbia Heights Association Assails Discrimination in Legal Jobs Here

Discrimination against graduates of Washington law schools in appointments to District jobs calling for legal training was condemned last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, meeting at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

The association indorsed the Sheppard bill for a District civil service with only bona fide District residents eligible for appointment. Another resolution asked Congress to defer action on the bill calling for registration of engineers and requiring a four-year college course before registration, in order that District residents might study the bill.

Sefton Darr, president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, spoke on suffrage, saying that if the plans for reorganizing the District government were carried through, the proposed council should be elected by the residents of the District. Alexander Cruickshanks proposed a poll of the United States to find out if the country favored suffrage for the District.

Dr. A. V. Smith was given authority to take all possible steps to press Congress for appropriations to start work immediately on the new Wilson Teachers College building.

The following officers were nominated for re-election: Col. Luther R. Maddox, president; George H. Brown, Col. Glendie B. Young and Dr. Erwin Steinman, first, second and third vice presidents; Mrs. Marie F. Maddox, recording secretary; Walter L. Swanton, corresponding secretary; John M. Butler, treasuerer; Col. Maddox and Brown, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Dr. A. V. Smith also was nominated for election as third vice president.

Japan Using Crisis for Gain, Dr. Finch Says

Europe Overlooking Seriousness of War In Orient, He States

European nations, engrossed in their struggles at home, are overlooking the growing seriousness of the war situation in the Orient, Dr. George A. Finch, of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, said last night at All Souls' Unitarian Church.

He spoke at the "Ladies' Night" dinner of the Unitarian Laymen's League, also featured by the elevation of Howard L. Knight from the vice presidency of the organization. Also named were Emory Foster, vice president; Walter Ramberg, secretary, and Massie W. Blankinship, treasurer.

"The European nations are pursuing a short-sighted policy," contended Dr. Finch, "in maintaining two armed camps over what seem to me to be minor objectives, and allowing things to develop in the Far East the way they have."

Japan is taking advantage of the crisis in Europe to carry out its program of making Asia a place for Asiatics, said the speaker, who was introduced by Dr. J. H. Dellinger, toastmaster and retiring president.

Petworth Church's Sweetheart, At 89, Is Inveterate Traveler

MRS. HARRIET A. YACKEY

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

A bunch of the girls were whooping it up at the birthday party for Mrs. Harriet A. Yackey.

"She's the sweetheart of Petworth M. E. Church," said one.

"Have you seen the quilts and tablecloths she's made lately?" another asked.

"Where else will you find a woman 89 years old who travels cross-country alone?" challenged still another.

"Make her give you her recipe for strawberry preserves," said a fourth prompter.

Mrs. Yackey just sat back in her chair, gifts and congratulatory messages piled on a table before her, and blushed.

Her Nominations Set a Record

A lot of people must think a lot of this little gray-haired lady, if the number of nominations she received for "Life Begins at 70" is acceptable as an indicator. In this respect, she set a record.

Recently she returned from a five-week visit in Florida, going and returning alone. Last summer she soloed to Portland, Oreg., to visit a son. Now she is planning a trip to South Dakota to attend a wedding. Her friends would not be surprised to get postcards from her postmarked Singapore or Helsingfors.

Mrs. Yackey lives with her daughter, Mrs. Fred R. Young, at 6525 First street northwest. The party was held there. She was 89 on Sunday. There is hardly a room in the large house that is not decorated with samples of her fancywork-bedspreads, quilts, afghans, doilies, chair covers and so forth. Practically all of them were made since her eightieth birthday.

Active Member of Church Groups

While she was in Florida she collected shells, starfish and sea horses and worked them into patterns for three ornamental glass-bottomed trays. As soon as she got back to Washington she plunged with renewed vigor into her home and church routine.

Mrs. Yackey, a native of Illinois, has lived here for 21 years. She is an active member of all of the Petworth M. E. Church groups for which a woman is eligible. She has to be ailing a good bit to miss a Sunday service, and she is rarely absent.

Rhodes Case Expected to Go To Jury Today

Perjury charges against Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, are due to be submitted the jury in District Court today.

Justice Adkins will hear the final arguments today and is expected to begin his charge to the jury about noon.

Rhodes testified for himself yesterday and denied that he knew the statement of the Fidelity's condition to which he swore in 1935 was false. The Government claims the statement misrepresented the Fidelity's condition. Rhodes said the association's troubles were due to a prejudice against it on the part of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Lieut. Smedberg To Aid Adm. Stark

The Navy Department announced yesterday the appointment of Lieut. William R. Smedberg 3d, a Washingtonian, as aide to the new Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark.

Lieut. Smedberg is the son of Brig. Gen. W. R. Smedberg, jr., U. S. A. retired, 1810 Wyoming avenue. He married Claudia Stuart Barden, also of the District. Lieut. Comdr. Charles Wellborn, jr., was named as Admiral Stark's other personal aide. Well known in Washington, he also married a Washington girl, the former Gerry Morgan.

Adults Most Need Tubercular Care, Ruhland Says

Care of adults suffering from tuberculosis was urged yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland as the best way of preventing the disease among children. His statement was a comment on a speech by Dr. Frank Walton Burge, of Philadelphia, who told the District Tuberculosis Association yesterday that it was easiest and cheapest to eradicate tuberculosis by treating children.

Declaring he had no wish to reopen a controversy that had already hampered the District Health Department in its work, Dr. Ruhland stated later the need of curing the adult who spreads the infection. "The child will not give trouble if we take care of the open cases of adults," he said.

2 Children Hurt By Automobiles

Knocked from his bicycle by an automobile behind his home, Eugene Fitzpatrick, 5, of 223 First street northeast, suffered a fractured right leg. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Mary Rollins, colored, 5, of 732 Seventh street southeast, was struck by an automobile while playing near her home. At Providence Hospital doctors said she sustained head and possible internal injuries.

Mayo S. Silvey, 29, of 1457 Monroe street northwest, driver of the automobile, was charged with reckless driving.

Patterson Backs U. S. Business Aid

Must Co-operate To Bolster Economic System, He Tells Junior Board

Co-operation with business "in buttressing our economic system . . . within the framework of democratic processes" is "the need and responsibility of Government," Assistant Secretary of Commerce Richard C. Patterson, jr., declared last night.

Efforts are under way "on many fronts to help business meet rapidly changing conditions and adjust itself to our extremely complex economy," he said at the annual dinner of the Junior Board of Commerce at the Mayflower Hotel.

At the dinner, the Board of Trade Plaque was presented to John W. Brabner-Smith, chairman of the beautify-Washington committee, for the work of his group during the past year, and the junior board award was granted to Bernard J. Nees, chairman of the membership committee.

Research Urged

In his address, carried over a national raido hookup, Patterson emphasized that "one of our greatest concerns is the small businessman."

Explaining that the "mortality" among small businesses is high, he said the Commerce Department is urging Congress to approve pending legislation that would establish "economic and business research laboratories in every State in the Union."

Patterson remarked that the program "is designed to make available to the businessman — particularly the small businessman—tools with which to conduct his business more efficiently, broaden his markets, and enable him to keep apace with economic changes."

The Assistant Secretary pointed out the proposed program "is an optional and voluntary service."

Praises Parleys

Referring to recent conferences between Government officials and representatives of business, designed to acquaint industrialists with the "vast research facilities available to all business in the Department of Commerce." Patterson characterized the procedure as "a forward step" destined to be "most helpful in charting a new course of co-operation between the . . . business branch of Government, and the business community."

He declared the "job of running our Government . . . is made even more difficult by certain policies on the part of business," and as a result, the Government has had to take an active hand in economic matters.

"Just how far this participation by Government . . . should go," he stated, "is a subject of much disagreement."

"We might ask the even more fundamental question of whether Government policy can and should be directed toward restoring the natural forces of a truly competitive system, or toward establishing necessary controls which we have found do not operate automatically in our system of free private enterprise."

Patterson emphasized that "in a democracy" such questions have to be settled by the "will of the people."

Fifth Battalion Reserves Given Marine Corps Flag

The Fifth Battalion of the Marine Corps Reserve last night marched out of Union Station behind the scarlet and gold flag of the Marine Corps, the first reserve unit ever to carry the traditional colors of the regular service.

Presentation of the new standard by Brig. Gen. William P. Upshur, director of the Marine Corps Reserve, climaxed half-hour ceremonies in the terminal concourse.

A plaque was given battalion officers by Frank Wyman, of the National Rifle Association, in recognition of the Fifth Battalion's victory in a recent marksmanship contest for reserve units.

Individual medals were awarded to Capts. John E. Fondahl and Charles B. Nerren, Lieut. William J. Barrows, Sergt. Maj. H. F. Volkman, First Sergt. Harry B. Warner, Sergts. R. B. McMahill, William J. Blake and H. F. Stille, Corpls. J. E. Harris and W. R. Pigott and Privates S. M. Sowder, D. B. Cutter and W. E. Payne.

Lorton Grants Parole Violator Another Chance

The Parole Board yesterday granted a rehearing to Harry Yudelevit, who was freed five years ago, but returned to Lorton the same year for violating parole.

Yudelevit will be given another chance for freedom along with 19 other inmates when the board meets tomorrow at the reformatory.

He was paroled in the summer of 1934 while serving a 10-year term in connection with the shooting of Policeman Thomas Bacon. In November of that year he was arrested in an E street liquor store on orders from the board.

The other inmates whose cases will be heard are Mary J. Lemon, Dorothy McIntyre, Janie Clark, Mary Knox, Frederick Reamy, Oliver James, Albert H. Andrews, Andrew R. Walker, Edward W. Culpepper, James R. Young, Benny Witherspoon, Preston Hymes, Raymond K. Robertson, Andrew A. Lebolo, Joseph Brown, Mizell Bethel, Holmes C. Scott, Samuel M. Brown, Maurice C. Gordon.

Miss Hepburn Sponsors Anderson Fete

LaGuardia, McNary Are Added to List; Singer To Arrive Saturday

Katharine Hepburn, Mayor LaGuardia and Senator McNary, minority leader, have accepted invitations to act as sponsors for the Marian Anderson concert here Sunday, it was announced yesterday.

Also indorsing the colored contralto's recital are Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Walter Damrosch, noted conductor; Felix Morley, editor of The Post; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, newspaper publisher; Nathan Straus, housing administrator; Arthur Altmeyer, head of the Social Security Board; Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of division of territories and insular possessions, Interior Department, and Mrs. Mary Bethune, chief of the division of colored affairs, NYA.

Miss Anderson is expected to arrive Saturday. She sang Monday night at the Birmingham, Ala., auditorium to a capacity audience, the committee said, while all tickets have been sold for her recital tonight in the Atlanta, Ga., civic auditorium.

Swamped with checks and requests for tickets, committee members last night emphasized that Miss Anderson's Washington concert is free to the public. No more than 150 seats will be set up, it was said, and these are to be placed on the terrace of the Lincoln Memorial for honorary sponsors.

Automobile traffic will be routed around the area.

Blaze Breaks Out Near Fire House

Firemen from No. 7 engine house yesterday practiced their craft close to home when fire swept an unoccupied house at 1624 Covington street northwest, 100 yards from the station.

The first floor of the brick dwelling was gutted. The house is owned by Joseph Herndon, firemen said.

Fireman Injured In Fall at Fire

Private John Daly, of Engine Company 20, suffered a broken shoulder last night when he crashed two stories from a splintered ladder in fighting a fire at 4331 Forty-fourth street northwest.

J. C. Bradshaw, occupant of the house, and his daughter, Louis, 11, were driven from their beds by the blaze, which destroyed the roof.

School Officials Discuss Program For Saving Youth At Mass Meeting

Plans for a campaign to prevent growth of juvenile crime in Anacostia through joint action of officials of all public, private and parochial schools in the Eleventh Police Precinct were disclosed at an "antivandalism" mass meeting at the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School last night.

Dr. John Paul Collins, principal of the Junior-Senior High School, said a committee composed of principals of 13 elementary and secondary schools in the section would be formed to halt juvenile delinquency by individual treatment.

The mass meeting was called after Board of Education officials recently called attention to widespread destruction of school property throughout the District by vandals. The loss in the past year for window glass alone exceeded $14,000, it was said.

Collins said he would soon call a meeting of the committee to discuss ways to handle delinquent youth by preventive work in their homes.

Declaring "the root of all the evil" goes back to "ill-advised" parents, Collins said the committee would act as a "clearing house" in getting parents of lawbreaking children to pledge increased supervision.

Juvenile crime is now comparatively low in Anacostia, Collins asserted, but warned that with the expected rapid increase in population it would grow unless "drastic action' was taken.

Also speaking at the meeting was Capt. Hugh Groves, of the Eleventh Precinct, who stressed the necessity of discipline to combat an increase of child crime in Anacostia, and Marshal Levy, probation officer of the District Court, who advocated increased preventive work in homes.

Ruhland Warns Of Complications From Measles

Health Officer Ruhland yesterday cautioned parents not to think of measles as a "harmless disease of childhood."

"While it is true that with us measles, as such, rarely causes death, it is equally true that measles often is followed by complications which may cause serious lifelong damage, or by pneumonia, and even destroy life," he said.

A physician should be called when infants or delicate children under 3 show symptoms similar to a cold, he said.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Robert Montgomery Stops by for a Minute

Screen Star in Capital on Brief Visit; Testifies Before Congressional Committee; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, one of the most facile and most versatile actors on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot in Culver City, Calif., was very gracious when we ruined his first-act intermission at the National Theater on Monday night. He also was a little surprising in physical contours.

BELL.

We have remarked before upon the tricks the motion picture camera plays upon the eyesight. Mr. Montgomery, at least to these astigmatic eyes, is diminished in proportions upon the screen.

It was simply a repetition of what had happened in the cases of Errol Flynn, Bruce Cabot, Ralph Bellamy and the other male stars who were here for the President's birthday celebrations. They all seemed bigger than we thought they were. So does Robert Montgomery. If available statistics are to be relied upon, Mr. Montgomery is some 6 feet 1 inch in height and weighs in the neighborhood of 165 pounds. We should say, as an off-hand guess, that the poundage ought to be edged up to about 175.

Mr. Montgomery has been in town these last few days as a witness before the Congressional committee holding hearings on the Neely bill, having to do with the intricate matter of block booking and the like. We were pleased to learn on Monday night that his ideas concerning the projected legislation coincide almost identically with our own. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, as chairman of the board of the Screen Actors Guild, feels that the passage of this proposed law would work an incalculable injustice not only upon the film colony in Hollywood, but also upon the very independent exhibitors who are fallaciously advocating its enactment.

We have discussed the probable outcomes of the passage of the Neely bill in this space numerous times before—most of them a year or so ago—and are willing to go on record again that the success of the bill will tear down a structure that has been built up not on antagonisms and prejudice, but upon a "trial and error" test of the years that has evolved the best possible working policy for the industry. There are defects in the present modus operandi that need to be corrected, of course, but their remedy seems not to lie in the bill that now again is before the Congress for its serious consideration.

However, that is aside from the fact that Mr. Montgomery agreed with us completely as to which of the 54 major features he has made for the screen was his best. He thinks it was "Night Must Fall." So do I. Our concert of opinion may not be of any great comfort to Mr. Montgomery, but it is, more or less, to me. There was a bit of battling between this column and its two correspondents over the review of "Night Must Fall" that appeared on these pages. I liked the film and said so; others disliked it and also said so with no less vehemence.

Mr. Montgomery, if you have to know everything, is leaving Washington today for New York, where he will spend one day in showshopping—probably seeing Tallulah Bankhead in "The Little Foxes" and Franchot Tone in "These Gentle People"— and then will fly immediately back to Hollywood, where no picture assignment awaits him, but a few radio chores and other matters of importance do. He will not even have time to drop by his up-State farm in New York, much as he would like to. If it would not be violating a confidence, I could tell you, too, the picture, out of all he has made, that Mr. Montgomery likes least. It is the same one that this department holds in lowest esteem, and did when it was a stage comedy that seemed to hold out slight promise of interesting Hollywood. It interested its star even less and this reporter not at all.

These vagrant thoughts upon the fleeting visit to the National Capital of one of the screen's most talented and most ingratiating stars are not prompted entirely by a brief chat in the lobby of the National on Monday night. Mr. Montgomery was guest of honor at a cocktail party, tossed in the rooms of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel yesterday between the hours of 4:30 and 6 p. m., by Carter Barron and Rudolph Berger, our local Loew and M-G-M chiefs. It is an unfortunate circumstance that so much that was said was "off the record."

Speaking of Rudy Berger, reminds me that a wire has just come in from him to the effect that Master J. Raymond Bell—no relation—has won himself another major prize in national competition. Master Bell, the incorrigible space-grabber—as this paragraph gives testimony—of the loewcal Loew organization has just been made the beneficiary of a free-gratis-for-nothing junket to Paris in May, as a reward for the advertising, exploitation and publicity campaign he waged in behalf of "Marie Antoinette," 'way back when. This makes the fifth succulent plum, or thereabouts, that Master Bell has plucked himself these past few years. His other awards have embraced everything from plaques to a trip to Italy and two or three negligible $500 cash prizes. Nice going is what I always say.

It never rains but it pours. A few days ago there came to hand from Oscar Doob—whom we maligned so maliciously for his doubt of the screen success of Shaw's "Pygmalion"—a copy of Emily Bronte's novel of "Wuthering Heights." Yesterday there arrived from Samuel Goldwyn a letter expressing the veiled thought—not too veiled—that in this subject he really has done something for the screen. I am ashamed to say that I nver have read the book and as yet have had no opportunity to see the picture. These are matters that will be taken care of in due course. Assuredly, I shall accede to Mr. Goldwyn's request: "I therefore hope that, after having seen 'Wuthering Heights,' you will write me a personal note and give me your frank opinion of the picture and its purpose."

Sorry to have missed the screening of 'Four Girls in White' yesterday, but hope to catch "Midnight," paradoxically, this noon. More of these later.

February-in-April Notes

Hey, Mr. Weather Man, what's the big idea? Don't you know the moths have the overcoats by now?

Is One of the 'Midnight' Stars

CLAUDETTE COLBERT,

who is costarred with Don Ameche in "Midnight," to be screened for the drama desks today and presented to the public on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning Saturday. Also in the cast of this picture are John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie, at the National last week in "My Dear Children;" Mary Astor, Francis Lederer, The Post's Hedda Hopper and many others of note

6 A. M. " . . . and I'm starting my gym-work today, dear . . . And I'm going to diet, too . . . What? You think I'm slender enough to go to Hollywood and play in Westerns? . . . Oh, no, . . . I can go to Hollywood, all right, but not to play in Westerns . . . Maybe in Mae Westerns."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 4.—He was a famous comic, in the good old days when vaudeville was a profession and the New York Palace was heaven. He came to Hollywood and for two solid years got not one single nod from any casting office. Went from agent to agent—all tried. They knew he was dynamite on a variety bill. A few weeks ago he picked out the spot on that famous bridge and gave his luck until the week to run. Then, as often happens when you put your own number up for the final curtain, his agent got a bid.

HOPPER

The comic went for the interview, was told he didn't look like the Italian that was wanted. Something desperate in the way the comic said he knew he could play it, caught—shall we say—the director's sixth sense. "You don't look it, laddie, but read this line for me." Our hero put everything he had in it; the director thought a minute. The world stood still for the comic—life or death depended on that decision. "All right, you don't look it, but I'm going to take a chance on you. Our casting office will give you a call."

Next morning on the set, the director not only let the comic read lines his own way, but let him ad lib and gave him added scenes. The director is Bill Keighley, and after that first interview Keighley phoned caster Kumin and said, "Don't let that man escape. Sign him. He's terrific." He is; his name is Joe Sully. Put it down in your book, you'll be seeing it from now on.

Claire Booth's play, "The Women," is just about to open in London. Seems the Lord Chamberlain, who passes on those things, insisted it should be called, "The American Women."

And now we hear that Rosalind Russell is going to play the part Ilka Chase did on the stage. Because her name means more at the box office. Isn't that discounting the drawing power of Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Ina Claire? Roz is a fine actress, I like her, but if she worked from now until doomsday, she couldn't get the bite into that part that Ilka puts into it. And they'd better look out for Margaret Main as the waitress, she'll steal every scene she gets her nose in!

A friend of George Raft wants to write his life story, calling it "The Man Who Threw Away a Million Dollars"—meaning that Paramount contract. Yes, George was so dumb he'll probably make $5,000,000 instead.

Seems to me that the Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye picture, "Thousand Dollar Touchdown" should be "Touchdown Lost in Two Tunnels." Happy to see Joe E. at Paramount—if the story rates, he'll do things—wait and see.

Buck Jones couldn't go to Dodge City. Went to work instead. So did I, in "What a Life"—always wanted to play Jackie Cooper's mother. He's the kind of boy any woman would be proud to call "son."

Brian Aherne's brought his parents over from England. So that's why he bought that house!

Alan Hale was so delighted with his new five-year contract at Warner's, that he told his agent to go out and buy anything he wanted, 'Well, how about a house? I bought myself a car yesterday!"

Poor Rudy Vallee, who's trying so hard to be an actor, had to learn to do a jitterbug contest with Edna Mae Oliver in "Second Fiddle." As a dancer, Rudy is a runner-up—to Gable!

Chester Morris is heart-broken because he didn't get the magician's role in "The Illusionist"—Chester's the best Houdini in town.

With Andy Devine's full grown beard, he was introduced around town as Man Mountain Dean.

Celebrating what purported to be its golden jubilee performance—50 years of continuous popularity in all lands where English and music of the most lilting sort are understood—"The Gondoliers" last night was presented as the second bill of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company's week's engagement in the National Theater in a diversified repertoire of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas.

The D'Oyly Carte Company, as a sheer matter of fact, is crowding the anniversary performance of "The Gondliers" just a trifle—not in the matter of year, but in the item of month. This sterling work, which has been one of the most successful of the Gilbert and Sullivan collaborations since its first performance, was given to the stage at the Savoy Theater, in London, on December 7, 1889. Perhaps we should not carp over a discrepancy of a mere eight months. We are sure we shouldn't when the excellence of last night's interpretation of the two-act piece is taken into consideration.

"The Gondoliers" last evening was acted and sung with that incomparable skill that marks all of the works of this unique organization. Perhaps as near an approach as Gilbert and Sullivan ever made to legitimate light opera, this romantically musicalized comedy presents few of the characteristics of the casual "operetta." Its first act is almost entirely sung, with only occasional recitatives and periods of dialogue; its second and final act is a spectacular revelation of colorful investiture and chromatic embellishment.

Runs Musicianly Gamut

The score of "The Gondoliers" covers a wide span of creative ingenuity. There are solos, of course; quartets, madrigals, concerted numbers and all of the other musical and lyrical devices to which Gilbert and Sullivan were so prone to resort. The rounded effect is one of superlative auricular and visual diversion.

The second night of attendance upon a D'Oyly Carte program emphasized in at least one critical mind the perfection with which all elements of light operatic appeal are co-ordinated in the Savoyard works by this gifted company. Perhaps the various bills are rehearsed to the measured beat of a metronome. They are perfect enough in every welding of song, speech, facial play and gesture to give that impression. Yet, contradictorially enough, they seem to be completely spontaneous in interpretation.

The story of the royal and plebeian changelings expounded in "The Goldoliers" is too well known to need further exposition here. It is a flamboyant tale, with a Venetian background that gives every excuse for the most extravagant play of characterization, setting and musical decoration. It receives all three at the hands of the London company, paying too short a visit to the National Capital.

Stars Reappear

Several of those who appeared in the inaugural dual bill on Monday night reappeared last night in pivotal roles. Foremost among them, needless to say, was Martyn Green, whose Duke of Plaza-Toro is one of the gems of his wide gallery of effective portraitures; Evelyn Gardiner, haughtily imperial as his Duchess; Helen Roberts, one of the finest of the coloraturas the D'Oyly Carters have brought to these shores; John Dudley, Leslie Rands, William Sumner, Sydney Granville, Leonard Osborn and all the rest whose names are recited in introduction of these hurried midnight remarks.

It would be an easy matter for the Savoyard players to slight their production in the matters of costuming and stage settings, if they so wished—just as they might "clown" some of the action, songs and lyrics of the classic pieces, if they were so disposed. But they do none of these things. Last night's production of "The Gondoliers," despite the fact that it was observing 50 years of honorable service, might have been offering its premiere performance. It was received as if it had been.

Bills Change Again

This afternoon, the bill will be "Iolanthe" and tonight, "Patience." Both enlist the services of the foremost of the D'Oyly Carte artists. As we have said on previous occasions—or have intended to—there is nothing to choose among the various bills of this distinguished band of players. They are incomparable in the interpretation of works that have stood the test of decades.

The only lamentable aspect of their present engagement is that it is to continue for only one week and so few of their vehicles are to be made available to the Washington public twice—only "The Mikado," which will be presented at both matinee and night performances on Saturday.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 4 (INS).—Helen Vinson and Fred Perry are going to separate again—but without any trouble. It's purely a professional break this time, with Fred booked to go on with his tennis tour and Helen remaining behind to play one of the leads in "Memory of Love" with Carole Lombard, Kay Francis and Cary Grant.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I'll be glad to see Helen on the screen again, and I have no doubt so will countless other fans, for she was always one of my favorites in the chic character parts she played. Few actresses ever equaled Helen's flair for clothes. Though she's been away from the American screen for over a year it's easy to see why she wants to return. Everything is completely ironed out with her tennis champ husband now—and with marital worries off her mind—she can really concentrate on her work again.

The battered old piano that has brought forth so many of Irving Berlin's hit tunes, is being pressed into service again. Irving is writing a new musical for Darryl Zanuck and he is calling it "Say It With Music," the very same moniker that he and Sam Harris gave the stage musical comedy that opened New York's Music Box Theater years ago. But the resemblance ends with the title, for Irving is concocting a brand-new music idea for Twentieth Century-Fox with 25 'old songs. So far Alice Faye is the only star even considered.

If Myrna Loy has a cold, George Brent a crick in his back, or Tyrone Power a tummyache while they are making "The Rains Came," it will have to be a sudden pain. Clarence Brown today revealed that every member of the cast will be required to take a daily physical examination and adhere to a rigid diet. Clarence is taking these precautions because the crew and cast work in almost continuous rain in the Louis Bromfield story, and the insurance companies will not cover losses unless such measures are taken. You can see what it would cost if any of these high-priced people or any of the rest of the company was incapacitated while a movie of this expensive nature was being put before the cameras.

William Dieterle, director of "Pasteur," "Zola," and other Paul Muni hits, wants time off and the chance to make one outside picture a year. That's the deal which now is being discussed for him at Warners. What Dieterle actually wants is to direct "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for RKO. The job has been offered him and all he is waiting for now is Hal Wallis' okay to the new arrangement. Since Warners want to keep Dieterle, one of their ace directors, happy, I shall be surprised indeed if the deal doesn't go through. The Dieterles, who are returning from the East, are bringing with them Lina Deyers, an actress from the Netherlands.

I realize how long I have been writing a movie column when I am told that this younger generation has never seen William S. Hart on the screen. Well, the boys and girls who only know the hero of the old rip-roaring Westerns by reputation, are going to have a chance to see and hear him. "Tumbleweeds," one of the best pictures he ever made, is being relaused with a special musical score composed and arranged by James C. Bradford and Arthur Guitman and a foreword by Bill himself. When I think of Bill Hart I am reminded of the time he visited Chicago at the height of his popularity and I went with him when he made a personal appearance at a theater. The wheels of our car were literally torn off and the windows smashed in the eagerness of the fans to get a look at their hero.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Charlie Chaplin has been in bed for over 10 days with a bad case of flu; Reggie Gardiner and Mary Brian aren't fooling. They really like each other; the Johnny Mack Browns are the parents of a baby girl born today. That makes their third child; youthful Margaret Roach tells me that she and Robert Paige have broken their engagement because of all the talk of an elopement; Binnie Barnes back from New York busy denying all the rumors that she is engaged to Moss Hart. Wonder if Binnie and Jean Negulesco will travel to the altar; Joseph Schenck and A. C. Blumenthal with Renee De Marco listening to Peggy Fears at the Versailles. Although estranged, Blumey and Peggy remain good friends; Louise Stanley, who has been stepping almost every night with her former, Addison Randall, took time out and dined at Marcel's with Joseph Pasternak; Bette Davis, who used to play the ingenue lead in the George Arliss' movies, dining with the English actor and his wife at the Chateau Elysee on their last evening in town.

Gracie Allen is learning to drive a car and all the Maple drive residents keep off the streets while she is having her daily lesson; Mary Carlisle and Dick Cromwell a devoted twosome at the Ball; Cary Grant entertaining Cyril Gardner, Lee Bowman and Wendy Barrie in honor of Phyllis Brooks' house guest, Wilhelmina Leach; the winning baseball autographed by all the members of the Hollywood stars was presented to Bob Cobb's pride, Gail Patrick. She's their mascot.

That's all today—see you tomorrow.

Rockefeller Scion Steps Out With Popular Actress

New York, April 4.

OF ALL the upstanding John D. Rockefeller sons, the best-looking and most dashing is Winthrop. In the last year or two he has become a prominent and popular figures in our better night life—and he is, to state one of his most valuable qualifications, a bachelor.

A few weeks ago he and Mary Martin, the "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" girls of the musical stage and one of the most sought after belles of the season, won first prize as the handsomest couple of the evening at the night club El Morocco. The award was, you may remember, a credit of $100 in high-priced groceries—which Winnie certainly needed. Now, it is whispered around town, the heads of the Rockefeller clan are looking down the nose at Winthrop's nocturnal activities and have suggested that he give up these pleasurable pursuits and get to work on the dot in the morning.

I do not know that little Mary, the Texas cutie, is his prime favorite, but in any case he would have plenty of competition just now. Her show, "Leave It to Me," recently celebrated its 150th Broadway performance and will undoubtedly run on into the summer, what with the Fair and all. Two years ago this shapely baby-dolly was an amateur dancer, and taught the local boys and girls how to point their toes and one, two, three, dip. Tiring of this, Mary went to Hollywood and snared herself a contract, though to date she has not made a picture. When June Knight left her role in the show, Mary was tested and stepped in. Her professional and personal success was immediate, with a deep bow to that novelty song which by this time is one of the leading curses of the Nation's radio sets.

Whatever the Rockefeller situation, the Martin mite never lacks for beaux, anyone who sees her quickly realizes no wonder!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Beauteous Merle Oberon popped in and out of town recently, pausing briefly and then catching a boat for Italy. I hear she is to marry Alexander Korda, the noted and able European film producer . . . Mary Astor is still around town, taking in the shows.

Local scribblers say that the Duchess of Windsor (a curtsey, please!) started the vogue for wearing diamond bracelets outside the gloves—and the stunt is now current among local swells. The general thought among our best minds is that it is somewhat on the vulgar side, whoever started it . . . Ah yes, them as has, gits. No doubt about it.

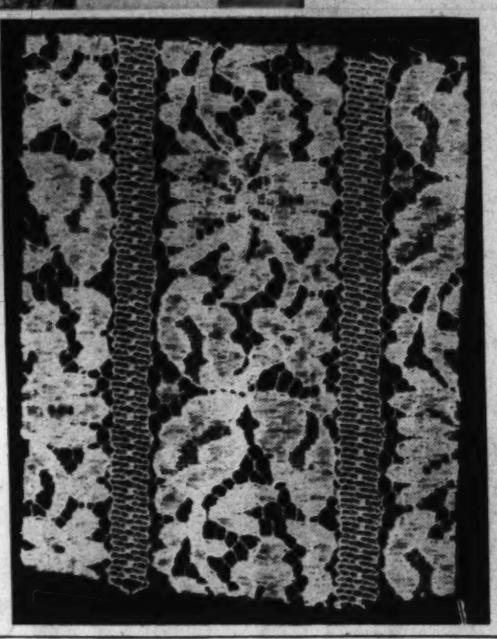
Cotton Lace in Tailored Shirtwaist

Keeping coolly frocked and immaculately s6, is one of Washington women's chief concerns, come late spring and summer. Experienced shoppers take to simple, classic sportswear, similar to the frock illustrated. Doubly delighted will they be to find that muggy, hot days can be conquered with washable cotton lace. This lace may look like it costs a fortune, but is as inexpensive as it is practical. A swatch of Ducolor cotton is reproduced below



Once suitable for "party frocks" only, the new cotton laces are practical solutions to the dress problem of office or classroom. Ducolor lace frock (above) is horizontalled in red and cobalt blue stripes, woven on an eggshell background. This trim shirtmaker dress, fastened with jeweled studs, is adaptable for wear with navy accessories now and with wheat-colored accessories later

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Logan Clendenning

Daily Eye Wash Called Unnecessary, Likely to Weaken Defenses

THE EYE needs no treatment to keep it healthy if it is already healthy. I mean that a daily eye wash is unnecessary. The eye washes itself, with a constant flow of a neutral lubricating fluid secreted by the lachrymal, or tear, glands. The fluid is slighthly antiseptic and prevents the growth of germs under ordinary circumstances. It washes out or dissolves all sorts of dust and foreign matter which naturally gets into the eyes on account of their constant exposure to the air.

To put drops in the eyes at night or in the morning, or to use an eye cup to wash them when there is nothing the matter, is not only unnecessary, but positively likely to bring on trouble as the eye wash probably weakens the defenses.

Defenses Break

The eye, however, as we say, is constantly exposed to irritation and infection, and sooner or later, in all of us, the defenses break down and it succumbs. There is hardly any human being who has not once had a case of pink eye, or at least irritation of the lids with some little gummy secretion in the morning.

When these minor irritations occur it is then time to use the boric acid—a saturate solution—either dropped in the eye with a medicine dropper or used in an eye cup. The eye cup should be nearly filled with the solution. Lean over at your washstand, press the eye firmly into the eye cup, then throw the head back and, with the eye cup held partly by suction, open and shut the eyelids rapidly four or five times until the eyeball is completely cleansed. The boric acid should cause no pain or discomfort but, on the contrtary, should be soothing.

Infections along the lids, consisting of small hair follicle infections, hardly big enough to be called styes, are annoying and should be treated with a 10 per cent solution of alcohol gently brushed over the edge of the lid with a camel's hair brush. An old, reliable remedy for this is ointment of the yellow oxide of mercury, standard strength. Many oculists, however, think this old remedy is ineffective and prefer ointmnet of zinc sulphate.

In conjunctivitis, which is the stylish name for pink eye, for an acute form, the latest advice is that we can save six to eight days of discomfort by using one-half-per cent solution of zinc sulphate. Boric acid is too weak in these cases and argyrol, a favorite remedy, in the solution of 10 per cent has comparatively little effect in cases of acute conjunctivitis. Methylene blue in very concentrated solution is effective, but should be used only by an expert oculist.

Crown Jewels To Be Worn Here

This spring for the first time in the history of the British Empire, British crown jewels will cross the Atlantic. When England's King and Queen come to America in May, they will bring the royal crowns with them.

Queen Elizabeth will bring the crown that contains the famous koh-i-noor diamond. hThe crown is made of platinum and set entirely with diamonds. It has detachable arches so that it may be worn as an open coronet. hThe koh-i-noor may be detached from the crown so that the Queen can wear it as a pin.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Denounces 'Showers;' Says Couples Shouldn't Wed Unless They Can Provide the Wherewithal

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is not so serious as some you receive, but I imagine it is more prevalent! I refer to the ancient (?) custom of "showers" for brides and mothers-to-be. It is my personal conviction (perhaps selfish) that girls shouldn't get married unless they and their families (and the boys' families) can provide the necessary accessories, supplemented (usually generously) by voluntary gifts from good friends.

But when it comes to inviting any and all—including those intending to give larger gifts—to fork over on such-and-such a date, also, I think it's somewhat like passing the hat. Where did the custom come from, anyway? Perhaps it was more spontaneous, originally; but living the way we do nowadays, in cities with such large circles of friends, it's turning into a racket!

I admit I have only gotten a taste of it, because, fortunately, I didn't join a sorority. There's where it really becomes an annoyance. I know of girls who have been invited to contribute to the trousseaus of brides-to-be they have never met—and probably expected to be glad to do it, because of dear old sorority! Showers are boring, at best, for any but the recipient (and perhaps for her, too; or embarrassing, at least, if she feels as I do) and it is exasperating to have to comply with a custom you are against in principle, simply in order to be polite . . .

I have attended showers along with people I don't know and wouldn't care to (with a few exceptions); have been bored and slightly embarrassed and have contributed as nice a gift as I could afford—and have enjoyed the actual giving, since it is always a pleasure to give. However, one has only just so much. But now I am wondering if one can't let it go at that—let the shower presents take the place of the wedding gift? What do you think? In the latest instance (which gives rise to this letter), my husband and I know the betrothed couple fairly well (although neither gave us a wedding present when we joined up for life), and we hope to see more of them now that they are entering the ranks of the newly married.

What I really want, of course, is for someone to agree with me that "showers" are a barbarous custom, since I can't very well discuss the subject with fellow victims or the bride-to-be or her hostess, without seeming like an old grouch. Am I sort of anti-social in my attitude? Or are there others who feel as I do? To my way of thinking, "showers" are in the same category with "coming-out" parties.

Incidentally, I refused to let anyone give me a shower when I got married, (because, after all, the hostess must get her list of prospects from the honored guests!) and I have gotten along very well. In fact, it's really more fun, I think, to pick your own things (with no duplications). I wouldn't have missed it. On the other hand, I appreciate every spontaneous gift I received, and was surprised and touched by their number and usefulness! Sincerely.

PETTY ICONOCLAST.

Subject for Historians'

DEAR P. I: Just where, or how, the custom of giving "showers" for expectant mothers and brides-to-be originated, I do not know. I put the question to Marjorie Barstow Greenbie, widely known author and learned student of the American scene, whose latest book, "American Saga," (enthusiastically acclaimed by critics) is a colorful, factual narrative history of the colonization and social, industrial and cultural development of these United States. Mrs. Greenbie said that, with all her research of material which went into the making of her book, she never once came across anything pertaining to this particular custom.

This does not mean, of course—as Mrs. Greenbie herself remarks—that its origin is necessarily shrouded in mystery. It is perfectly possible that its history has been at least partially recorded; and if you are really interested in digging it up, the Library of Congress could no doubt be of invaluable service. Since you feel so keenly on the subject, why don't you make capital of that steam you are letting off in futile indignation, by harnessing or dedicating it to the proposition of doing some evangelical—and carefully documented—magazine writing on the subject, say, of, "The Offensively Obsolescent Shower?"

Such an article should find a ready purchaser in the up-and-coming woman's magazine market, if wittily presented and if—as you hope—it reflects the social attitude of a preponderant number of cosmopolitan maids and matrons. I happen to know that many women do share your sentiments on the subject, and I assume that they would be delighted to have their objections sustained in print. As for myself, who have sometimes participated in such affairs—although never as hostess or honored guest—I think they constitute social occasions rather more to the point than many of our bootles: teas and cocktail parties, which seem to serve no purpose whatever.

It is for you to decide whether to "let the shower presents take the place of the wedding gift." As you perhaps know, precedent rules otherwise, where the gift-giver makes any pretensions to social acquaintanceship with the bride-to-be or her fiance. If you expect to be swapping hospitality with the couple after marriage, I imagine you could face them with much more poise and peace of conscience if you were to dip into your limited means for one more sacrificial offering on the altar of Hymen. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Swishing Skirts Of Grandma's Day In Eastern Vogue

New York, (AP).—There's romance in the new spring clothes smart women will wear this Easter.

The bonnets of the '80s, the swishing skirts of the 70s, the starched petticoats, collars and frills of the gay 90s have all come back to give a sentimental air to fashions of '39.

Figures are small-waisted, girlishly curved of bosom and hip, and often are dressed in prim fitted bodices and short full skirts. Even make-up is keyed to the fresh natural look of the beauties of 1910.

The new frocks are designed to stress femininity and youth. Under the bodices fall gored, pleated, circular and gathered skirts which give a softly rounded line to the hips. (By contrast there are a few straight slim frocks.)

Social Poise Gets Popularity

WHO WOULDN'T be proud of her? A man always feels lucky to be squriing a smooth-mannered girl.

For whether you realize it or not, it does matter to men that you know your etiquette. They say nothing if you don't but watch them lose interest.

So check up on the rules. When your beau calls for you, greet him cordially, then introduce him to your family. "Mother, this is Robert Smith." "This is my brother Tom."

Ready to leave, let him help you on with your wrap—accept his arm as you step out on the dark sidewalk. But of course you won't play "clinging vine" in well-lighted public places.

And remember, you make a man feel "small" if you dash ahead opening doors, getting unaided into automobiles, pulling out your own chair at restaurants.

Let him have the fun of doing things for you. He likes to feel that you are feminine—and likes to show you he knows his etiquette, too. But if you're hostess, have asked a man to be your escort to a dance, it's up to you to see that he meets other girls, doesn't feel a stranger.

You're always a welcome guest, a popular hostess, if you know fine points of etiquette—the considerate thing to say and do.

When a guest on a motor trip, shall you ask your hostess if you can pay some of the expenses? Not unless she is a close friend—but you may suggest refreshments, pay for those.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Etiquette for Every Day," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Stripes Prevail in Schemes For Spring Decorating

Popular in Borders for Bedspreads And Dressing Tables; Floral Designs Fit in Best With Many Interiors

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

PROBABLY stripes were the first design men thought of when style came into style . . . and they're the latest. For all collections of new fabrics for spring decorating include stripes in one version or another.

There are broad simple smart stripes; there are charming Persian stripes; there are subtle East Indian stripes. But by and large it is the floral stripes that enchant us most, that fit in most pleasantly with our home scene.

Striped Borders Popular

Many are used as they come; others are used as borders. Often you can buy a few yards of a striped material and adapt it to outline slip covers, finish off bedspreads or dressing tables. A stripe can often be cut out and pasted around the window frame of a window that is curtained with plain white voile. Or use it as the cornice—with white dotted swiss tie-backs. For that matter, a stripe cut from chintz or unglazed cotton can be used for the ruffles around plain white muslin curtains to good effect.

There is an attractive floral striped chintz on the market that seems to be tempting the decorators to all sorts of bright notions. We saw it used the other day in a very pretty bedroom. Walls of the room were painted white and all the furniture budget had gone into a fine mahogany highboy . . . that meant that the other things had to be rather makeshift, and yet the effect turned out to be very pretty indeed.

Pleasing Bedroom Style

The beds, for instance, were springs and mattresses on frames with plyboard headboards padded and slipcovered in pale blue chintz outlined with a stripe cut from a floral striped chintz. The spreads were made to match, with pleated flounces, while the quilts for the foot of the beds were of a solid piece of striped chintz. Dressing table and bench had pleated flounces, too, finished all around with the same stripe. Add an old rose rug, and you can see what an attractive effect you'd have!

Your Figure, Madame!

1939 Gibson Girl Style Calls for Waist Slimming

THERE IS a revival on and, judging by appearances, we are all going to wind up as converts to exercise. The most ubiquitous new-comer among the spring fashions is the shirtwaist-and-skirt handed down by the Gibson Girl—and if there is one thing you cannot wear with a wayward waistline, it is that combination.

To make maters worse, we have a substantial bone to pick with the designers. That style was no great trial for the G. G.'s figure. She wore her skirts right down to the chewing gum on the sidewalk, and it doesn't take a designer to discover that the longer the skirt, the smaller the waistline looks.

"It's Simply Flattening"

But our 1939 skirts are chopped off, and the whole effect topped with a sailor hat. All that is not flattering, it is flattening!

You could, of course, wear blinders and ignore the whole business, as some of our best dressed women will. But this problem style is part of a trend to play up the figure, with special stress on the waistline, and it bids to go on for years. It is no secret that the waistline is expected to be about 5 inches smaller than it was a decade ago, but the entire midsection should be slim. The fashionable ideal is to have a waist that measures 9 inches less than the bust and to have the ribs and hips far enough apart that you have to stretch the hand in order to place the thumb on the lowest rib and the middle finger on the crest of the hipbone.

Don't be discouraged if your proportions do not meet these ideals, for very few do. But you can have a slim midriff and a tiny waist. All you have to do is exercise. One of the best exercises for this region is extremely simple and easy. Lie on the back on the floor with the arms stretched on the floor over the head and the legs stretched down. Without raising shoulders or hips off the floor, bend acutely at the waist to one side, trying to bring the hands and feet as close together as possible in a semi-circle, but keeping arms and legs on the floor. Return to the original position and bend at the waist to the other side.

A Vigorous Exercise

Here is a more vigorous exercise, but one that works fast to slim waist, tummy and hips:

Lie on the back on the floor, with arms straight out at the sides shoulder level, and the legs together and straight up in the air. Keeping the legs together, drop them over at the right side of the body so that they are parallel with the right arm, draw them up toward the right elbow and then raise them straight up in the air again. Repeat, dropping them over at the left side. Do not let the tummy protrude as you exercise.

Those two measures constitute an excellent beginning program to slim the midsection. Later on the exercise should be varied to keep up your interest and to make sure that all the important muscles are used.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay.

Working Girl's Vista

I

The good old summertime is approaching,
The time of long evenings spent in the bathroom.
Washing out the white gloves, and breathing a prayer
They'll be dry in the morning; and of cleaning white shoes,
And of getting the powder all caked on your nails.
And of laundering girdles and cute little blouses.
(Just a little too cute to go to the laundry)

II

The good old summertime is once more returning,
The time when the ironing board is set up every evening,
For the pressing of all the "non-crushable" linens
And voiles; and when silk prints that once seemed so lovely
Are heavy and sticky, and you have dark designings
On persons who told you that sheers would be cool.
And you swear that next summer you'll search the world over
To find dresses allergic to dirt and to wrinkles.

III

The good old summertime is once more upon us,
The time of doing hair up on tin curlers
In places where the permanent has felt the humidity;
The time of worrying whether to carry an umbrella
Each day for fear rain will fall on your trappings
Before night; and of pondering the unsolved enigma
Of a smart summer wrap; also how to have comfort
In clothes without aping a belle from the country.

IV

The good old summertime is hovering near the office,
The time of rowing over the exact location
Of the electric fans, and if and when they shall be running;
The time of dusting chair seats, and of putting paper
Carefully on places where you sit to avoid sticking;
The time of arguing over who shall have the late vacations;
The time of push, push, push and doubling up on other's duties;
The time of getting things ahead and coming back to piled up worries.

V

The good old summertime is just around the corner,
The time of hearing morn and night the rasping
Of the neighbors' radios, the bawlings of their kiddies;
The time of waking tired and achy after humid nights,
And reading in the papers that "everyone"—that is almost,
Has left for cooler climes or cottage in the county;
The time of week-ends spent at smelly, gaudy beaches,
And of Sunday picknicking with the ants and chiggers.

VI

Yes, the good old summertime will soon be present,
The time of knowing those ineffable thrills of coolness,
That come with storms at end of torrid days;
Of watching poplars gallantly quivering their aliveness
In midday heat; of scenting the faint whiff of honeysuckle
On the night air; of seeing frail old men and women happily
Sitting in the sun; of watching maple leaves flash their silver linings

Old-Time Styles Appeal to Men

Hollywood, Calif.—It's "fashions like mother used to wear" that set a boy's heart a-flutter and increase the marriage rate, maintains Olivia de Havilland who has played in enough-costume stories to know. Fan mail tells her that men fall in love with girls who resemble mother in her youth and dress as she did then.

Minister Procope, of Finland, Makes Bow at Two Parties Today

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

ONE OF THE NEWEST, youngest and most attractive envoys in the Capital faces a double-barreled partying schedule today. At a tea this afternoon and a dinner tonight, the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Johan Procope, will make his bow to a sizable section of Washington notables, many of whom have been looking forward to meeting him.

HOPE R. MILLER

Both fetes are to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, whom Minister Procope knew before he came to the Capital to assume his current duties. The tea will take place at the Hurjas' home on California street, but the scene will shift for the dinner, which will get under way at 8:30 o'clock at the 1925 F Street Club.

Entertaining for famous Finns is getting to be a habit with the Hurjas. And why not? If there's any American in the Capital who feels an unusually close kinship with Finland, it is Emil Hurja. He is of Finnish descent; he played a prominent part in ceremonies connected with the Finnish Tercentenary celebration last June; he has been decorated with the Order of the White Rose of Finland; and he and his wife (who is also of Scandinavian origin) have an extensive circle of friends in Finland, where they have visited.

The dinner tonight may be somewhat reminiscent of a similar event last June when in the same setting the Hurjas feted Finland's Minister of Foreign Affairs and Mme. Rudolph W. Holsti. Then, as will probably be the case tonight, the guest list was a cross-section of Washington society with representatives from the Cabinet, the Diplomatic Carps, Congress, and the residential set.

Several hundred guests from all these circles probably will be present this afternoon to meet the dashing minister who, although he has been here only a brief time, is already well on the road to becoming one of the most popular members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Is Not Seeking 'Glamour' Crown

Rumor has been going the rounds that Minister Procope will be a strong contender for the crown that from time to time has rested on the handsome head of many so-called "glamour-men" of the Capital. Well, you can discredit that at once, and for all time. Mr. Procope will step out of that race before he gets in it; and laurels that he is sure to win in this country will stem from something besides the feminine fanfare that swirls around many dashing foreigners.

In other words he has plenty besides his good looks to recommend him; and while it is true that during his days in Geneva he was frequently mentioned in the press as "the handsomest man" in the League of Nations Council, he also won acclaim as one of its most successful presidents. And if you have any doubts about his other accomplishments —look at his record. How many men, of any nationality, can you name who at his age have served a country in so many important capacities? He has been twice minister of foreign affairs, once minister of commerce, twice an envoy, and several times special representative to economic and inter-parliamentary conferences.

Minna Gombell Visiting Here

Recently slipping into town for a rest and what she hopes will be "a quiet stay" is Minna Gombell, stage and screen actress, who is the guest of Miss Maxine Davis in her Georgetown home. Miss Gombell motored across the country from California, arrived here the past week-end and expects to be off soon for New York.

If her present plans work out, Miss Gombell will spend most of her time here resting. There are a few parties being whipped up, very informally, for her; others have been offered, and there's no doubt about it, if she chose to stay longer and was of a mind to go out more, she could have quite a whirl here. Miss Davis, who has known Miss Gombell for several years, visited her not so many seasons ago in Hollywood after making her across-the-country trip in search of material that later was used in her book on the younger generation.

Italians Plan Vacation Trips

Several members of the Italian Embassy circle will sail this week for vacations in their homeland.

The Air and Military Attache and Signora de Coppola will sail on Saturday on the Conte de Savoia for a month's holiday. On Monday evening they were hosts at a dinner in honor of the newly arrived Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna.

Maids at White House May Not See King and Queen When They Arrive

IF THE MAIDS at the White House are held to the rule laid down for certain domestics in the British royal household, they are apt to be the one group in Washington not to get a glimpse of the King and Queen on their state visit to the Executive Mansion. A man we know once employed a woman who had worked at Balmoral Castle for several years without ever seeing the royal pair except from a distance in the grounds. This was because royal etiquette forbade the parlormaids even to be present in a room when either the King or Queen were there. They had to do their tidying up at other times, and were draw before Their Highnesses given plenty of notice to withcame in. This particular maid was supposed to spend half an hour a day cleaning up the sitting room of Queen Mary, and when she entered at the door was locked behind her until the time alloted for her to clean was ended. Even if she finished her dusting ahead of schedule, she was expected to wait inside until her half hour was up.

WASHINGTON is one place where the present vogue for showing home movies is not apt to be boring. So many people here have lived in so many countries that instead of having to look at endless pictures of the baby or grandmother, one is treated to Bali dancers or other scenes of a Burton Holmes nature. Tonight, after the small dinner of three or four people which Harry Villard will give for Elim O'Shaughnessy, the host will show films of his recent trip on a State Department mission to Liberia. On this journey, which he made via a United States cruiser, Mr. Villard took along a flag presented to that country by the Phelps Stokes Foundation. It was a replica of the original Liberian flag which had been made many years ago by a relative of Canon Anson Stokes, and the same bunting was used to fashion the copy. The replica was carefully packed under glass in layers of anti-moth material so it would not fall apart from old age on the journey.

JOHN DUDLEY, charming member of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, whom we met at dinner the other night, tells us that this year the Gilbert and Sullivan troupe is without its famous mascot, the little old lady who attended their every performance in England and who used to travel to America to see them here. Nevertheless, there are still a number of men and women who come all the way from Scotland and other parts of Great Britain just for the D'Oyly Carte season, going to the theater every night. They like to become friendly with members of the cast, who call them "uncles" of the show.

DIPLOMATIC DOINGS: The newly arrived Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna, will do no large-scale entertaining until after the arrival of his wife, still in Italy. Senora Cardenas, wife of Franco's new Charge d'Affaires in this country, is lingering on in New York for an indefinite time before joining her husband here. Five minutes after the loyalist envoy, Dr. de los Rios, left the embassy for good, the chancery telephone was disconnected and still remains so . . . Alvar Aalto, Finnish architect, and one of the leaders of Europe in this field, will be in Washington tomorrow and Friday and will be honored at a dinner given by the newly arrived Minister of Finland, Dr. Hjalmar Procope.

ODDS AND ENDS: The Junior League is trying to get together with the private schools to bring order out of chaos in the present system of Easter vacations. No two schools seem to have the same, and mothers are getting tired of having their children arrive in shifts . . . All the new Hungarian Legation needs to be a complete country club is a golf course. Not only has it a swimming pool and tennis court, but also a bowling alley. Mme. Pelenyi gave a little bowling party there the other night for two young nephews from Cleveland . . . Mrs. Margaret Sanger has ended a visit with Mrs. Shaw Parker, of Georgetown, and everybody who met her says she is full of charm . . . E. W. Pavenstedt has moved over to Sherlock Davis' house while Mrs. Pavenstedt is in Tuscon, where she will be until June . . . The dinner which Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Howard and Princess Margaret Boncompagni will give next Tuesday at the F Street Club for Miss Maisie Howard will be followed by a very small dance . . . Alexander Wilding White will give a cocktail party tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Hanna Visit William H. Lipscomb at Raspberry Plain

MR. AND MRS. CARL H. HANNA, of Cleveland, Ohio, have been visiting William H. Lipscomb this week at his home, Raspberry Plain, near Leesburg, Va. The Hannas are well known in Virginia's hunt country. He is the son of the late Dan Hanna, of Cleveland, and is a grandson of the late Mark Hanna. His first cousin, Katrina McCormick Barnes, lived on her estate in Virginia before her marriage.

At Paddock Lane Farm, Willoughby, Ohio, near Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Hanna maintain the best breeding establishment of hackney ponies in the country. Starting off years ago with the well known team of Sunrise and Sunbeam which they purchased from William Wannamaker, they now have the leading string of winning hackney ponies in America with which they take ribbons and championships at all horse shows. Head of their stud is Cassilis Masterpiece, 11 years old, standing 12-2 hands and now considered the top hackney sire in America.

Casillis Masterpiece has defeated every pony in America except King of the Plain since he was a 2-year-old. He will defend his championship again at Devon, Pa., this May.

MR. AND MRS. HANNA left yesterday for Cleveland but many of their friends in Virginia are looking forward to seeing their horses in the ring at Devon. Mrs. Hanna drives her own horses and is considered an expert in the way she "handles the ribbons." She is also well known for her articles on horsey activities and uses for her pen name, Gertrude L. Hanna.

Mrs. Cary T. Grayson has as her guests her three sons, Gordon Grayson, Cary T. Grayson, jr., and William Grayson. Gordon and Cary are attending Yale, and William has spent the winter with his mother in Washington. Gordon is on the Yale baseball team and will leave this week for the team's Southern tour. His mother saw him play at New Haven on Monday. When the Yale nine plays the University of Virginia, many of Gordon's friends in Virginia are expected to go to Charlottesville to see the game.

MRS. SETH MORTON, of Saratoga, now at the Carlton Hotel in Washington, went down to the hunt country for a brief visit yesterday.

Before her recent marriage to Ralph Holmes, the former Libby Holman Reynolds spent the day in Middleburg, being a luncheon guest of Miss Frances Morrison at Welbourne. No mention was made, even at that time, of the wedding which was to take place the next day. Another luncheon guest, with Mrs. Holmes, was Mrs. John Durant.

The Green Spring Valley Hunt in Maryland will hold old-fashioned point-to-point races this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The races will start at Edwin Morgan's place and finish at J. W. Y. Martin's place.

Garfield's Directors Tea Guests

Mr. Aspinwall Host To Women as Well As His Own Group At the Folger Home

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Clarence A. Aspinwall, president of the board of directors of the Garfield Memorial Hospital, was host at a tea for members of his board and of the women's board yesterday afternoon at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Folger, 2991 Woodland drive. The occasion was the first in recent years at which the two boards have been jointly entertained. Mrs. William Foster Burdick, president of the women's board, received with Mr. Aspinwall and Mr. and Mrs. Folger.

Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, former superintendent and staff member of the hospital, who recently retired and is now on the board of incorporators, reviewed the history of the institution. He told how the establishment of a general hospital for the District had been considered before the death of President Garfield and of the decision to name it for the martyred President.

A mass meeting of citizens of the District was held to decide on the name and Associate Justice Samuel Miller, of the Supreme Court, who was the first president of the board of directors of the hospital, presided at the meeting, he said. The Miller Building at the hospital was named for him.

Look Ahead 1,000 Years

"On May 18, 1882, the hospital was formally incorporated. After several amendments to the original charter, which extended for a period of 20 years, it is interesting to note," said Dr. Reichelderfer, "that the incorporators became more optimistic and incorporated for a period of 1,000 years, from May 17, 1884."

Dr. Reichelderfer was presented by Mr. Aspinwall. After his talk, tea was served in the dining room, where the table was appointed with a centerpiece of yellow tulips, white snapdragons and freesia. Mrs. William A. Morgan and Mrs. John Price Wetherill 3d, members of the women's board, poured. Others who assisted were Mrs. Charles B. Crawford, Mrs. Henry A. Willard 2d, Mrs. Francis Winslow.

Plans Under Way for Benefit

There was discussion of plans for the annual spring benefit to be held at the Raleigh Hotel Friday afternoon, April 14, with Mrs. F. Henry Jones as chairman. The first benefit given for the hospital was held in the rotunda of the Capitol in 1884 by permission of Congress and one has been given each year since.

Among those present were Mrs. J. C. Boyd, William R. Castle, Mrs. Charles B. Crawford, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, William Montgomery, F. M. Bardley, Mrs. Harry H. Semmes, Mrs. Edgar J. Goodrich, Mrs. Caryl Burbank, Mrs. J. L. Huffman, Mrs. George Ward, Mrs. Brice Toole, Mrs. H. A. Brooks, Mrs. Carl D. Loos, Mrs. Charles Hamel, Mrs. L. Howell LaMotte, jr., Mrs. William C. Meloy, Mrs. Randolph Leigh, Mrs. H. Kennedy McCook, Mrs. F. A. Moulton, Mrs. A. Colter Wells, Mrs. Gustav Emery.

Seventy-Fifth Club Participates in Swim

Mrs. William T. Byrne, wife of Representative Byrne, of New York, was in the spectators gallery yesterday at the Shoreham pool when members of the Seventy-fifth Club took a dip. Mrs. Byrne is president of the club.

Those swimming with Mrs. Herman P. Eberharter, leader of this particular sports unit of the club, included Mrs. Ed V. Izac, Mrs. Robert G. Allen, Mrs. Albert Thomas, Mrs. Edward H. Rees, and Mrs. Harry R. Sheppard.

To Return

Mrs. Howell Moorhead will return in time for Easter from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where she has been spending a brief holiday.

To Be 'at Home'

Mrs. Noble C. Powell, wife of the dean of the Washington Cathedral, will be at home on Friday, April 21, at their residence, 4500 Cathedral avenue.

This is one of a series of programs being sponsored this season by the auxiliary. The first was the showing of the F. B. I. film, "You Can't Get Away With It," and others will be arranged later, but this is to be the high light of the year.

Serving on the committee with Miss Howry are Mrs. Goodwin Rhett, jr., Mrs. William Mackall, Mrs. Rozie Dulaney, jr., Miss Josephine Watson and Mrs. Robert Henderson, jr.

In addition to the talk by Mr. Tunney, a short motion picture will be presented, showing wild animal life in the national park, and Theodore Golden, well known magician, will entertain.

Czech Exile Turned Lecturer Is Petite Wife of Professor

MRS. JAROMIL SLADEK, formerly of Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, has just returned from the South, where she gave a series of lectures on conditions in Europe. Her audiences were not only interested in what she had to say but on several occasions had a surprise when the lecturer, announced as "Dr. T. W. Sladek" turned out to be a petite woman.

Mrs. Sladek (or Dr. Sladek, if you prefer to be exact), has spoken before several groups in Washington since the sudden change in her country made it necessary for her and her husband, a former professor at Charles University, to remain here. Those who know her can appreciate the amazement of those expecting to see a tall, solemn man, perhaps with gray hair and spectacles, when a smiling, little person with fair hair and blue eyes and a pretty accent to her English came out to talk to them.

To add to the humor of the situation, in one or two places she had been preceded a few days by Maurice Hindus who, in his lecture, stressed the height of the Czechs in his description of them. At Furman University, Greenville, S. C., where she lectured before three different groups, a stand for her notes had been arranged on the platform but it was so high and she was so small she could not see over it and had to step to the side in order to see her audience.

Earlier in the season, she gave several lectures in the Middle West before colleges and club groups. She will go to Baltimore next week and to Pennsylvania at the end of April.

She and her husband are making their home in Washington.

DR. HECTOR DAVID CASTRO, Minister of El Salvador, accompanied by Mme. Castro, will be guest of honor Tuesday at April meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the A. I. M. E. at the Highlands. The business meeting at 11:30 a. m. will be followed by luncheon at 12:30 p. m. and a talk by Dr. Castro.

MRS. HEBER H. VOTAW, president of the League of American Pen Women, entertained members of the branch Sunday evening at her home in Takoma Park, Md.

The program included a talk on "Influence of the Arts on Civilization," by Rector H. Floyd, custodian of the Congressional Library, and a discussion of "How Rhythm Enriches Our Lives," by Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the D. C. branch. Miss Martie Richards Tyler, also of the District branch, read some of her poems, and others on the program were Mrs. Donald Reed, who presented violin selections, and Mrs. Hester W. B. Provenson, who gave humorous readings.

THE FRIENDSHIP GROUP of the Junior Jewish Consumptive Relief Society, under chairmanship of Marian M. Ostrow, held a "blind date" party at the home of Claire Shapiro, 2511 Wisconsin avenue, last week.

Other members of the Friendship Group assisting Miss Ostrow were Betty Ullman, Cynthia Gray, Nan Goldstein, Hilda Rapport and Shirley Goldberg.

Among those attending were Tillie Norwood, president of the Junior J. C. R. S.; Irene Salomon, honorary president of the Junior J. C. R. S.; Rose Jewler, treasurer of the Junior J. C. R. S.; Shalomith and Getta Novak, Charlotte Topoloff, and Miriam Zeltzer.

WPA Service Group Forms

The nucleus of a citizens' advisory committee to the household service program of the Works Progress Administration was formed yesterday at a luncheon given at the household service project, 1114 O street. The object of the committee is to interpret the project to the community from the viewpoint of both the employer and employe.

The household service project is designed to secure employment of women certified for jobs on the Works Progress Administration who possess aptitude for private household work; to establish a community service informing the general public of the technique of household employment and the responsibility of employers as well as of employes, and to maintain practice houses where prescribed courses in household service are taught.

Mrs. Izetta Jewell Miller, regional supervisor of Region 3, Professional and Service Projects of the WPA, came from Baltimore to attend the luncheon. Miss Bhicoo Batlivala, of India, who is in this country on a lecture tour and the guest of Mrs. Richard Hogue, was among the guests and much interested in the project.

Mrs. Marvin Gives Musicale At Her Home

Columbian Women Of G. W. U. President Hostess to Society

A musicale presented by Mrs. Cloyd Heck, Marvin, president of the Columbian Women of George Washington University, assisted by Mrs. Dorothy Radd Emery, pianist and Mrs. Jessamine Hartman, organist, was the program yesterday at the April meeting of the society. Mrs. Marvin was hostess to the members at her home, 2439 Tracy place, and her pipe organ was used for part of the concert.

Mrs. Marvin opened the program with a German group including "Fur Musik" by Franz, "Mai Nacht" by Brahms, and "Sonntag" by Brahms. Mrs. Emery, who accompanied her, followed with two piano numbers, Polonaise C sharp minor by Chopin and "Hungarian" by MacDowell. Mrs. Marvin's second group was of French songs, "Vous dansez, Marquise" by Lemarre; "Romance" by Debussy, and "L'Esclave" by Lalo.

The next group, combining organ, piano and voice, included "Come Unto Him" from Handel's "The Messiah," and "Panis Angelicus" Cesar Franck, followed by an organ and piano duet, "The Swan" by Saint-Saens. The closing group was "Here's April" by Sanderson, "Down in the Forest" Ronald and "The Piper of Love" by Molly Carew. Her encore was "The Cocoon Romance" by Geoffrey O'Hara.

Margaret Sanger Finds Demand For Birth Control Data Growing

More and More of Underprivileged Group Seeking Information, Leader of Movement Says

A growing demand for birth control information among people of the underprivileged group was cited as an encouraging fact yesterday by Mrs. Margaret Sanger, leader of the birth control movement for the past 20 years. Officials of social agencies, employed by the community to do maternal and infant welfare work, should put their prejudices aside when they accept office, she said, and see that the families who appeal to them for help have the benefit of enlightenment.

Mrs. Sanger, here for the day as the guest of Mrs. George Rublee, attended the annual meeting of the Mothers' Health Association at the Textile Museum of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, 2330 S street, yesterday afternoon. She was introduced by Mrs. Prentiss Willson, re-elected yesterday as president of the association, which maintains a birth control clinic here at 715 E street southwest.

To Aid in Raising Funds

Mrs. Sanger has just returned East from Tucson, Ariz., where she spent the winter, to assist Dr. Richard Pierson, president of the newly-formed Birth Control Federation of America, in raising funds for its work. The federation represents a merger of the American Birth Control League and the Clinical Research Bureau, of which Mrs. Sanger was the head. She now is honorary president of the new organization.

Nothing is more encouraging than the awakening of such people as the tenant farmer, the share-croppers and migrant workers, whose large families present a serious social problem, to the fact that they can limit their children to a number they can care for, Mrs. Sanger said. They are asking for information and should not be kept in darkness, she asserted.

A motion picture dealing with a share-cropper's family was shown after the meeting illustrating the poverty and misery resulting to both the mother and the 11 children in the poverty-strikcne home.

Mrs. Sanger, during the 20 years of her work, has sought to have the dissemination of birth-control information made part of the public health program.

Other Officers Also Re-elected

Officers re-elected to serve with Mrs. Willson in the Mothers' Health Association for the coming year include Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice president; Mrs. Fontaine C. Bradley, secretary, and Mrs. Lewis C. Ecker, treasurer.

New trustees elected to the board were the Rev. John L. Mixon, of the Washington Federation of Churches; Joseph Sanders and Mrs. John L. Proctor. Those holding over are Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Mrs. Milton W. King, Mrs. Worth B. Daniels, Frederick A. Ballard and George Hewitt Myers.

CHEF ARMOND FISSON

A rotund export of France, the image of everything a chef should look like, beamed expansively on a dozen scurrying scullions yesterday in the kitchen of the Carlton Hotel and muttered a couple of "morte bleus" under his breath.

He is Armand Fisson, on whom has descended the greatest honor of his profession—in a week he is to prepare Washington's "Les Amis d'Escoffier" dinner. Headed by a delegation of epicures from New York, a group of the most critical and expert gourmets who ever worried the meat from a lobster shell will pass judgment on his wares. His responsibility, Fisson feels, is almost as great as that resting on the shoulders of "le Presidon Rosevel."

Since Christmas he has been assembling his menu. He cabled his brother in Paris to procure rare black walnut oil to dress his salad. He canvassed Washington wine cellars for vintage stock, for was not G. Selmer Fougner, an epicure with both sensitive and scathing tongue, to head the New York diners?

Fisson served his apprenticeship at the Ritz Hotel in London when the great Escoffier himself, greatest chef of his time and model of those to come, was "directoire de cuisine."

Fisson began his career at 13 in Paris. His sauces are famous in Zurich, the Bristol Hotel in Vienna, the Ritz-Carlton and Waldorf-Astoria in New York and the Roney-Plaza in Miami.

Fisson's affair on April 13 will be introduced by "les perles du Volga accompagnies de Blinis de sarazin," which is caviar and Blinis. With the aperitifs (cocktails are verboten) will be served "quelques amuse Bouche," or canapes.

The dinner will really get under way with "La Marmite de quene de boeuf a la Parisienne," or ox-tail soup in layman's language. It will be accompanied by old port.

Next come "Les Filets de sole a la Nantua" with Chablis, 1928.

"Les mignonnettes d'Agneau de Printemps Bercy avec les fond d'Artichauts Clamart" will follow. This is a lamb chop with white wine sauce and shallots. Chambertin 1928 comes with it.

The next dish, "Le Pate de Faison Lucullus," is cold pheasant, embellished with truffles and foie gras. The walnut oil, as well as wine vinegar, goes on an escarolle and chicory salad served with the fowl.

Flaming Kirsch will emblazon the dessert, "Le savarin au fruits frais," while Pommery & Grene 1926 champagne will wash it down. Afterwards comes "Moka" and at long last Courvoisier 1914 brandy.

Security Taxes Won't Be Levied On Strikers' Pay

By the Associated Press.

Strikers and their employers, the Treasury ruled yesterday, need not pay social security taxes on "back pay" given strikers upon reinstatement under National Labor Relations Board orders.

The Treasury said the social security act taxes only wages paid "in remuneration for employment," and characterized the "back pay" as "payments to the employes on account of unemployment caused by an unfair labor practice."

*X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, APRIL 5, 1939 21

Cronin's Errors Help Reds Win, 18 to 7

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., April 4.—There is a gnawing suspicion in the Washington camp that young James Wasdell will not fulfill the demands of a big league first baseman, but as yet there is no audible sighing over the release of Zeke Bonura. The Nats' bosses are still very much content about last winter's deal that sent Bonura to the Giants in exchange for $25,000 in cash.

POVICH

If ever there appeared cause for Clark Griffith to regret that deal, this would seemingly be the time. Wasdell hasn't been hitting the size of his hat band, and, moreover, is exhibiting one of the worst batting strokes ever brought into the big leagues. He is still a wild swinger, he offers at bad balls, takes good ones and otherwise is mired in futility at the plate. Summed up, he looks pretty horrible.

But Clark Griffith refuses to be unduly exercised. "No, we won't miss Bonura," he snorted today. "We'll never miss him."

That was tall talk about a player who barely missed the .300 mark last year and was in the higher brackets of run producers with 113 runs driven across the plate. And Mr. Griffith was reminded of that.

Griff Remains Adamant

"It makes no difference," declared Griffith. "If Wasdell doesn't hit a lick until July 15, we'll still be even. Bonura didn't hit a lick, either, until that time. And we're better off at first base."

There isn't much doubt about that. With Wasdell playing the bag the Nats are, indeed, better off at first base. Balls that were hit past Bonura and allowed to scamper on their unhammeled way, Wasdell is turning into put-outs. And with all his hitlessness, he has one distinct edge over Bonura at bat. He isn't hitting into double plays. He has the speed to avert that kind of damage when he does meet the ball. He doesn't have Bonura's infectious team spirit, but he's no mummy out there in the field. It's kind of chipper, if that is any help.

Wasdell's apt to think a bit more quickly than Bonura. Big Zeke was an amiable fellow, a big bumptious guy who put his all into his baseball, but he never has been accused of being a clever thinker out there around the bag. Perhaps you know one story they tell about Zeke.

Bonura and the Balloon

It was while Bonura was something of an idol around Chicago when he was with the White Sox, and a baseball writer was walking home from the ball park one evening with the big fellow. They encountered a hawker on the street corner selling toy balloons.

Zeke was captivated by a multi-colored balloon in the shape of a blimp and stopped to admire it.

"It's a beauty," said Zeke. "I'd like to have it to take to my kid sister down in N'Orleans. Biggest balloon I ever did see."

"How much is it?" his companion inquired of the hawker.

"Ten cents, one dime," was the reply. "Selling out fast and may not have 'em tomorrow," he prodded.

But Bonura apparently was uninterested. He walked away. "Too bad," he told his companion. "I'd like to have had that thing to take to my kid sister in N'Orleans."

"Well, why in the world didn't you buy it, Zeke? It was only a dime. That ain't much."

"No, that part was all right," said Zeke. "I don't mind the dime. But how in the world could I get that big balloon in my bag?"

According to Griffith, never for a moment has he regretted the deals that sent Bonura and Al Simmons away from the Nats last winter. "Those two guys weren't doing us any good. I don't care how many runs they drove in. They were drawbacks."

One Zillion Runs

Reminded, that between them, Bonura and Simmons had driven in 213 runs for the Nats, Griffith was unmoved. "I don't care," he said. "That only proves I'm right. Know how many runs those two big bums should have driven in for us last year? A zillion, that's how many."

In the enthusiasm of his disgust at the pair, Griffith almost reached for a cigar, despite the fact that three weeks ago, on doctor's orders, he abandoned the weed.

"Those two fellows weren't any help. My gawd, every time they were up there at the plate they had men on base. There wasn't another club in the league that had fellows who could get on base like Case and Lewis and Travis and Myer. They were always hitting and walking or beating out bunts. Anybody who could hit at all should have broke all existing records for driving in runs. Why, I'll bet you that young Joe Gordon, who batted only .256 for the Yankees, would have smashed the runs-driven-in record if he had been batting fourth or fifth with Washington last season."

Which was not such a far-fetched conclusion on the part of the old gentleman who has been looking at ball players, man and boy, for nigh onto 52 years.

On the Line

With Considine

New York, April 4.—It's no particular honor, in view of the calibre of the colleagues he had to best, but if present plans go through the opening game for the Washington Nationals this year will be pitched by Joe Krakauskas, a big Lithuanian who was discharged late last season by Trenton, N. J., for incompetence.

CONSIDINE

The opening game at Washington is one of baseball's best shows, for it brings the President out of his hutch on Pennsylvania avenue and you can't throw a rock without hitting a charge d'affaires ad interim or some favorite son looking after the interests of his back-home constitutents. It is a pitcher's day. For one thing pitchers are a couple of weeks ahead of the batters at that time of season. That makes them look better than they should. For another thing, opening day in Washington always meant that Walter Johnson would pitch. He chucked 20 years of openers, and even when he was an old man he beat Herb Pennock one year, 1-0, in 16 innings. He lent the occasion a permanent charm.

So there is a kind of glamour to this game. It is always played 24 hours ahead of the scheduled opening of the big show, to give the proper honor to the President. It puts a pitcher on the spot, no doubt of that, but certainly no one has ever been on more of a spot than this big bow-legged lefthander will be when he gets that white pill from Mr. Roosevelt and waddles out there to do or die.

He Arrived the Hard Way

His story should be an inspiration to every forlorn bloke in the minors, for Krakauskas came up the hard way, stood behind seemingly unconquerable barriers, and discovered a new way of seizing the sacred bullock by the antlers. He followed the lumpy bus roads where, a year before, a skinny pale-faced kid named Johnny Vander Meer had gone. For he, too, was in the New York-Pennsylvania league, and neither could win. Fame for both once was a feeble flame that wouldn't thrive.

He never saw a great deal of baseball as a kid. He was born in Canada. He's a Lithuanian, built like a lumberjack and sensitive about his name. Joe Cambria, a great hand at rounding up dishevelled rookies, won him in a bingo parlor in 1936 and Washington saw enough of him at training camp to know he wouldn't do. Griffith brought him back to Washington toward the end of 1937 and gave him a lot of private lessons in the lonely reaches of Griffith Stadium, and told the boys that he couldn't miss for 1938. He was a terrific bust, Bucky Harris for a time just wouldn't believe any ball player could be as wild as Krakauskas. He started Krakky in a game between the Senators and Chattanooga at Daytona Beach one day a year ago at this time and the fellow walked 15 men in six innings, including an incredible streak of nine in a row.

One Wonderful Game

But Washington held on to him until one May day last season. It was the ninth inning of a game against the A's. The score was tied. Krakauskas had just dissipated a Washington rally by being caught off third base. And he capped this bit of sweaty inglory by walking the first three men to face him. Then he wound up with his great sweeping motion, and Billy Werber stole home with the winning run. The Senators could stand no more. They sent him to Trenton that night.

In his first game for Trenton he was belted for 13 runs in three innings by Wilkes-Barre. Then he blew up. Soon enough he was arguing with Cambria, particularly after one of those 300-mile rides in the bus that Cambria takes with him on his gypsy excursions through the minor leagues. Finally the fellow revolted. He wouldn't be a minor leaguer any more. He fled the Trenton team and came back to Washington in a day coach. Griffith found him curled up on a divan in his office one morning and, wanting to torment Bucky Harris a little more, Griffith sent Krakauskas to Detroit to join the Washington team. That was toward the shank end of last season.

Well, the point of the piece, fellows, is that the flopperoo from Trenton began to pitch some of the greatest baseball that was tossed last year. He won seven games. He shut out the Yankees and fanned eight of them. He finished second to Lefty Grove in earned run average. By the end of the year Griffith had many offers for the 23-year-old guy, the best of which came from the Yankees and Boston. Griffith values him at a modest $100,000. Jimmy Foxx, who did pretty well against them all, says he is better than Feller or Vander Meer and faster than Grove ever was. . . . This kid who simply refused to be a minor leaguer, and packed the ammunition to back up his one-man revolution.

Myers Paces Cincinnati's 18-Hit Attack

Werber Gets on Base Five Times; Red Sox Commit 5 Bobbles; Heving Chased in 5th

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., April 4.—The Cincinnati Reds started heavy scoring in the fifth inning today and didn't stop until they had the Boston Red Sox on the short end of an 18-to-7 score.

Billy Myers paced the Reds with four hits, including a homer, in the third inning. Werber got on base safely five times, twice when Joe Cronin, of the Sox, fumbled grounders. In all, the Sox committed five bobbles.

The Reds knocked Joe Heving from the box in the fifth with a six-run outburst and wound up the day with seven runs in the ninth, including a homer by Craft Schott. Naktenis and Walters held the Sox in check.

Blanton Hurls as Bucs Rout Browns, 14-1

San Antonio, Tex., April 4 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates smeared the St. Louis Browns, 14 to 1, in an exhibition game here today behind the excellent hurling of Cy Blanton, who yielded only six hits in seven innings.

The other Brownie hit was a single off Truett Sewell in the ninth.

Ed Cole, Bob Moncrief and Jim Walkup took turns facing the National Leaguers' fire, which rifled 16 hits of various length, Johnny Rizzo, Floyd Young and Lee Handley hit home runs. Brownie fielders booted the ball for six errors.

Birmingham, Ala., April 4 (AP).—Pepper Martin smashed out a home-run with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to save the St. Louis Cardinals a defeat at the hands of Birmingham in an exhibition game here today.

The Cards, trailing by one run when "the wild horse of the Osage" connected, then went on to win by a score of 17 to 11.

Paul Dean, who started on the mound for the Redbirds, was relieved by Morton Cooper after Birmingham scored three runs off him in four innings. Birmingham outhit the National leaguers, 14 to 13.

Butcher Hurls Phils to Victory

Dallas, Tex., April 4 (AP).—Recovered from the grip, Max Butcher pitched and batted the Phillies to a 3-1 victory over Dallas of the Texas League in an exhibition game today.

The big right-hander allowed only four hits and one base on balls in the four innings he was on the mound, and his single in the third inning scored two men and won the game. Three double plays by Shortstop Scharein and Emmett Mueller, second baseman, lightened Butcher's pitching burden. Elmer Burkhart, Philadelphia youngster, held the Steers for the last five innings.

Cozart First In North-South Amateur Golf

Durham Youth, a Late Starter, Breaks 8-Way Deadlock With Medal 74

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 4.—Bill Cozart of Durham, N. C., turned in a card of 35—39—74 today and won the medal in the North and South amateur gold championship.

Seven Yankees and a Southerner earlier had tied at 76 for the lead, when the North Carolinian slipped in, just before sundown, with the winning score.

Tied at 76 were George Dunlap, jr., of Pinehurst; Frank Strafaci of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dick Chapman of Greenwich, Conn.; Frank Allan of Pittston, N. Y.; Bobby Dunkelberger of High Point, N. C.; John P. Burke of Providence, R. I.; Charles Whitehead of South Orange, N. J., and Edward Meister, jr., of Clevelnad, O., a Yale student.

Nine players tied for the last eight places in the championship division of 32 with scores of 83.

Officials of the Pinehurst Country Club placed the markers on the championship course at about the same spots as for the recent North and South Open. That, combined with a stiff breeze, gave the amateurs a first-rate test. Par four holes, played in the wind, required two tremendous wooden club strokes to get home.

Chapman, who has been playing here since he donned long trousers, said he never had seen the course more difficult. Recent rains and an abundance of grass added to the amateur troubles.

Cozart, a late starter, had a slight advantage in that the wind did not blow quite so hard before sundown as during the greater part of the day.

Chamaco Captures World Billiard Title

New York, April 4 (AP).—Joe Chamaco, born 38 years ago at Guaymas, Sonora, Mexico, today became the world three-cushion billiards champion in winning two matches in the long tournament from Frank Scoville, of Buffalo.

Chamaco, representing New York in the tourney, clinched the title this afternoon when he won 50—31, in a 6-inning match. Then he went on to take the night game, 50—25, in 46 innings.

The two triumphs gave him a record of 50 won and 16 lost with six games still to play while Jay Bozeman, in second place, has won 45 and lost 24.

Anderson and Jacobs To Hurl Against Orioles

'Untried' Charlotte Pitchers Starred Last Year In Piedmont League; Harris Cool Toward Ortiz

By Shirley Povich.
Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., April 4.—A pair of young Americans who were unceremoniously relegated to the background while Bucky Harris was learning what he could learn about the Cuban pitching talent on the Nats will get their opportunity to bid for a job tomorrow.

Arnold Anderson and Bucky Jacobs—products of the Nats' championship Charlotte club in the Piedmont League—have been named by Harris as the pitchers to face the Baltimore Orioles at Daytona Beach.

Anderson has pitched a total of only five innings since the Nats set up camp here more than two months ago. Jacobs has seen even less action. He has pitched only two innings. Neither of the pair, who were potent factors for Charlotte last season, has been on the mound since March 20.

Cuban Experiment Over

"I feel a bit conscience stricken about Anderson and Jacobs," Harris said today. "The poor fellows haven't been given a chance to show what they could do and they came recommended to me as pretty good pitchers.

"But I had to find out what those Cubans amounted to. That's why I've been giving them preference. The great Cuban experiment is almost over, though. I know pretty well what they can do. Our veterans and the other American boys will begin to take over now."

Harris, as the saying goes, has been high on Anderson ever since the big right-hander put in his appearance in the Nats' camp. He likes the big fellow's action and the manner in which he turns loose his fast ball without a trace of wildness.

Jacobs, small as pitchers go, is recommended chiefly by his record with Charlotte, where he won 24 games last year. He lacks a fast ball, but the Nats' manager has been quite captivated by the fellow's curve and control.

Likes Monteagudo

Harris is not yet ready to give up on any of his Cubans. And for little Rene Monteagudo he is showing a downright fondness. He likes the business-like way in which the diminutive left-hander goes about the work of getting batters out with his well-controlled curve and occasional burst of speed.

"In my book he has a swell chance to stay with the club," Harris was saying.

Rutgers Lacrosse Boys Just a Bunch Of '8s' This Year

New Brunswick, N. J., April 4 (AP).—The Rutgers University lacrosse players suggest a course in arithmetic for the manufacturer who made their jerseys.

The boys were quite proud of their new uniforms until the cry went up—"Who's No. 8?"

The answer was that all of them were—according to the fronts of their jerseys.

It seems the manufacturer sent a sample jersey, No. 8 on both front and back, to Rutgers for inspection. It was approved and returned to him, and 30 jerseys ordered.

Soon they came—with the numbers on the back running from 1 to 30 but all with No. 8 on the front.

Wisconsin Shuns Track Meet Because Officials Bar Negro

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., April 4.—The University of Wisconsin athletic department announced today the Badger track team would not compete in a meet with Notre Dame and Missouri Universities at Columbia, Mo., April 15, because Ed Smith, Wisconsin Negro hurdler, had been barred.

Coach Tom Jones said Wisconsin's withdrawal was arranged by "mutual agreement" with Missouri officials.

Pressure from both the faculty and students prompted cancellation. The faculty adopted a resolution opposing participation of any Wisconsin athletic team in an intercollegiate contest in which a member of the team was barred because of his race. The Daily Cardinal, student newspaper, also urged withdrawal.

Barring of Track Star Explained by Committee

Columbia, Mo., April 4 (AP).—The University of Missouri intercollegiate athletic committee explained today it barred Ed Smith, University of Wisconsin Negro, from track competition here because of a standing policy. As a result Wisconsin withdrew from a triangular meet set for April 15.

"Competition between the white and colored races has never been permitted at the University of Missouri and it is felt that no deviation from this policy should be made," the committee said.

G. U. Reaches Two Hurlers For 14 Hits

Castiglia Homers With Bases Loaded; Capt. Reynolds Winning Pitcher

By Jack Munhall.

Smashing across four runs in both the seventh and eighth innings, Joe Judge's 1939 Georgetown baseball edition, a smooth, well-rounded nine, turned a fairly close game into a dismal rout yesterday as it opened its season with a 13-4 victory over American University on the Hilltop field.

To the complete satisfaction of some 1,000 fans and all others concerned, the Hoyas displayed good pitching, hard hitting and adequate fielding, though they were guilty of several tactical errors which evoked frowns of disapproval from Judge, the former Nat first base star.

American, returning to the diamond game after a lapse of nine years, had little with which to combat the powerful Hilltop squad, beside George Brown, a right-handed pitcher, and Sonny Werksman, third sacker, who obtained two of the eight hits the Eagles waggled out of Capt. Bill Reynolds and "Big Ed" Kowalski, Georgetown's pair of orthodox slingers.

Reynolds Stars

Reynolds, incidenally, was a source of great delight to Coach Judge, giving the Eagles exactly no runs and only two hits in his four-inning trick.

Working well behind near perfect control, Reynolds chalked up five strikeouts, four of them in succession in the second and third, and granted but two walks.

Kowalski, the gigantic football tackle who replaced Reynolds in the fifth was not so good, however, and there was considerable doubt in the ninth if he would ever retire the fight-to-the-last-ditch Eagles. Trailing, 13-1, American refused to quit and shoved over a trio of tallies in the final frame on singles by Harry Hertze, Hank Benjamin, Charley Stewart and Harry Newby.

But measly little hits such as these failed to make an appreciable dent in the imposing advantage the Hoyas had fashioned with a roaring attack of extra base blows.

In this exhibition of fireworks, Catcher Jim Castiglia, who replaced Stan Blaszek in the fifth, rapped loudly for attention. He rapped a terrific homer over the left-field embankment to clear the bases of three mates in the seventh and single-handedly smote across enough runs to tie the Eagles.

Castiglia's blow, a liner which was wafted by the minature gale that made life miserable for the fielders all afternoon, was one of three circuit smashes falling to Georgetown bats.

In the eighth, George Pajak, sophomore third baseman, and Joe McFadden, sophomore leftfielder, hit four-ply drives in succession to author 3 of the 4 G. U. runs in that frame. McFadden also connected for a triple and single in five trips, to emerge as the game's outstanding hitter.

Brown, American's most versatile athlete, a tall, well-built young man who will captain its football and basketball representatives next season, pitched six innings before turning over the mound assignment to Pete Sitnik.

Three Circuit Clouts

He also turned over to Sitnik, an eccentric gent who makes a habit of winding up with runners on base, the responsibility of restraining the Georgetown batters who had been taking few liberties with his high hard one and slow outcurve. But Sitnik disdained to take many precautions and Georgetown separated him from 7 of its total of 14 hits before it was over, including all of three homers.

American's first run resulted from a double steal in the sixth, which could have been prevented had Joe Moran, G. U. second baseman, tagged the man at second instead of relaying the peg home. The perpetrators of the twin larceny were Hugh Schulze, who was on first, and Sonny Werksman, who was on third. There were two outs at the time.

High Hedge, Paying $28.10, Wins Halcyon 'Cap at Bowie

Eddie Smith, D. C. Jockey, Rides Victor

Oros Brings Home Nicholas S., Pascua, Daily Double Pays Backers $129.90

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 4.—High Hedge, a 6-year-old with a reputation for being high on early speed and low on late courage, surprised a gathering of 6,500 turf fans this afternoon by hanging on long enough to take a thrilling photo decision in the Halcyon Handicap, a Class C event that featured the Prince Georges County turf program.

With Jockey Eddie Smith, Washington boy, in the saddle, High Hedge barely withstood a brilliant stretch effort of Mrs. E. A. Sexton's Irish Moon. Mrs. G. H. Emick's Unselfish was installed the favorite in the field of eight. The winner was operating in the white, red and green colors of H. L. Bowers.

Winner of 7 races in 17 starts last year, High Hedge was lightly regarded by the majority of bettors and provided a $28.10 mutuel for the few who believed he would open a lead long enough to insure victory.

Three-Length Lead

At the start of the 6-furlong event High Hedge was a prominent factor as was expected. He shook off his rivals at the far turn and opened a lead of more than three lengths. At this stage Unselfish and Royal Teddy were closest to the front runner, with Irish Moon a prominent last.

In the stretch, High Hedge began to wilt but he still held a lead. His closest opponent could not wear him down, but from the rear of the field came Irish Moon, fairly flying. Approaching the wire it was a question as to whether or not the coming horse could catch the stopping horse. The pair hit the wire as a team. The picture showed High Hedge the winner.

Jockey Polk Thrown

Distort threw Apprentice V. Polk and rolled over just as the field was nearing the starting gate. Jockey L. Fallon, on Star Struck, from the Vanderbilt Stable, lost a stirrup in the running. The winner paid $11.60.

Oros came right back to win the second race with Pascua to make the $129.90 daily double a personal propoosition. He brought the $14.10 shot from last position to win by a length from Geodesian. Third money went to Bing Bong, the pacemaker most of the way. Oros, a sensation at New Orleans last winter, proved his ability in the two races, both as a front rider and a come-from-behind rider.

High Vote, disqualified in his previous start in California, won the third race in a driving finish that saw Polly Hastings beaten a neck with Maecloud, the heavily played favorite, third and a half length farther back. Jockey B. Fels had the winner in front from the start but was forced to put on the pressure to stave off challenges of Polly Hastings. Jockey Stevenson allowed Maecloud to lag along in the early stages. He brought the choice through on the rail entering the stretch and she moved up mercsingly, only to hang in the closing sixteenth. High Vote paid $11.30 and ran the 6 furlongs in a creditable 1:13

Making her first start of the year, Short Cake carried the colors of J. P. Jones to a surprise victory in the fourth race, the Charlotte Hall Purse. Winner of only one other race in her career, the daughter of Chestnut Oak scampered home a length and a half in advance of Blazing Heat with Phara Belle third. Short Cake paid $59.20 in the five and a half furlong sprint.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PASCUA, $14.10, $5.40, $3.60; GEODESIAN, $3.40, $2.90; BING BONG, $5.00.

PASCUA, allowed to settle into stride and a trailer for a half, rallied when placed to drive, came between horses to take command in midstretch and held GEODESIAN safe while under stout handling. GEODESIAN was steadied along to backstretch, came to outside while making move and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. BING BONG was sent to front under hustling tactics, set pace to stretch and weakened gradually. GIMPEY was held safe throughout.

Daily Double, Nicholas S. and Pascua, Paid $129.90.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:37. Winner, A. Schwartz's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH VOTE, $11.30, $5.60, $2.70; POLLY HASTINGS, $6.60, $3.40; MAECLOUD, $2.40.

HIGH VOTE had good speed from start, withstood repeated challenges of POLLY HASTINGS and held on with rare courage under strong handling in final sixteenth. POLLY HASTINGS was hard ridden from start and closed gamely under drive. MAECLOUD was allowed to settle into stride, came through on rail when placed to intermittent punishment and hung in closing test. UGIN dropped out of it.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Charlotte Hall. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:01½. Off 4:04½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHORT CAKE, $59.20, $19.00, $7.20; BLAZING HEAT, $4.50, $2.80; PHARA BELLE, $3.50.

SHORT CAKE, forward factor from break, forged to front approaching stretch and drew out gradually under pressure to hold BLAZING HEAT safe. The latter, slow to begin and a trailer to stretch, came with a terrific rush in closing stages to be going fastest of all at end. PHARA BELLE was well placed from beginning, but weakened slightly in closing test. BLAZEAROUND weakened after making up ground entering stretch. ANTICOSTI could not reach serious contention.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100 added. The Halcyon Handicap; Class C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:31½. Off 4:37½. Winner, H. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH HEDGE, $28.10, $9.30, $4.60; IRISH MOON, $4.30, $3.00; UNSELFISH, $3.60.

HIGH HEDGE was urged to front approaching turn, drew out to long lead and barely lasted under good handling. IRISH MOON, allowed to settle into stride and a trailer along backstretch, came through on inside while improving position sharply and just missed getting up. UNSELFISH went close to pace and held on gamely. KNOXVILLE closed some ground in late stages.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:07½. Winner, A. C. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE SAND, $4.20, $3.00, $2.40; TRINA, $3.90, $3.10; WEEKLY STIPEND, $3.60.

WHITE SAND, going in best form and under steadying restraint while trailing for half, came to leaders with rush when asked and disposed of TRINA to win under hand ride. TRINA moved up on outside to take command leaving backstretch, opened a good lead and was best of the others. WEEKLY STIPEND had speed for a half. SUN VICTOR and HUNTING HOME were used up contesting for pace during first half.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:32. Off 5:34. Winner, Mrs. M. INTERPRETER, within striking distance of leaders from start, moved up boldly on outside approaching stretch, was rated to straightaway, rallied when put to drive and drew out. SPARTAN LADY, in close quarters at first turn, improved position gradually and came with good courage in closing test. ISLEWORTH gained gradually, saved ground entering stretch and showed good effort. PRETTY LASS closed a gap in final eighth. FOXTON was forward factor throughout. LONG BIT was held safe. ALBERT D. tired badly after being closest to pace most of way.

At The Post

Dear Al:

Everything's all right for the Charles Town rooters. Sammy Palumbo arrived yesterday morning. My Japanese rider, H. S. Takera, will not be seen in action for sometime. He was all set to ride but his leg was badly swollen. He is taking six horses to Charles Town and he intends to do some of his own riding. To J. W.—Discovery's first crop of juveniles will be around next year. To E. C. B.—A favorite usually pays more to show when the other money horses are long shots. After the track deducts its "take," the pool is divided among the three show horses in ratio to the amount played on each. Naturally if three heavily-played horses are in the show pay-off, there is little left to form the profit for show bettors. However, if two of the three show horses have drawn little play there is a larger amount to be divided. The larger the money to be split, the more money there is available for the favorite players. However, there are times when there is so much played on a favorite that he will pay only $2.10 no matter what other horses finish in the money. The horse, Bright Mark, suffered a bad cut on a leg while breezing and was scratched from yesterday's sixth race. Jockey Danny Driscoll, who fell Monday, will be back in action in a few days. Adhelmar and Mantagna are the latest additions to Starter Milton's schooling list. Jockey H. Dupuy arrived from Oaklawn. Due to the controversy that marked the Anticosti race here, when the filly finished on the outside rail and failed to get in the official photo, a small stand has been placed back from the line to give the placing judges a better view and to get them out of range of the camera. James J. Carroll, St. Louis betting commissioner, reports plenty of action on Porter's Mite for the Kentucky Derby. He has cut the price from 20-1 to 15-1. Speaking of odds dropping, Tobacco Road, held at 1000-1 a few weeks ago, now is 100-1. Carroll says he believes much of this money has been wagered on hunches. Frank Menke, author of those handy sports record books was a visitor yesterday. He is the publicity department for the Kentucky Derby. BILL.

First race—Marion W. took the overland route to finish a close second behind Pimlico Queen opening day, and with better racing luck should have little difficulty whipping these maiden juveniles. Fiery Vision showed speed with this company last outing and may be the one to beat. Brave On has worked well.

Second race—Jolly Flag showed clever effort running with Zenana over this oval last fall and should like this distance. Needs only to be fit to get these cheap maidens. Phillips Pete, said to be a good thing, makes his first start in a long time. Fernbrake is not outclassed and may prove dangerous.

Third race—Little Drift dropped a nose decision to Teddy Patie last Monday after showing speed all the way, and meets decidedly cheaper competition in this field. Cobe beat this kind here last out and appears capable of taking care of the others. Woodsia has some class, but recent races have been poor.

Fourth race—Chalmac sprinted with top line colts in Florida and went very well over this track last outing. A slow beginner, he should get up to beat this field. Superstition raced well at Santa Anita and figures to supply most of the contention. Robespierre needed his last and should show improvement.

Fifth race—Watersplash, slow to start, closed fast to gain second place to The Queen last Saturday and deserves the call here. Lourdes indicated a return to form when an easy winner last out, and may be the one to beat. Anglo Saxon has speed and could last for show position.

Sixth race—Rowes Crump turned in a creditable effort his first start here this year and, nicely weighted in this, he has the edge over these platers. Yarn Sox had fair form at Santa Anita, is dropping down and may prove hard to beat. Bounding Count likes this track. Should go well if fit.

Seventh race—Clever Girl received liberal betting support when fourth in similar company Monday after a rough trip. She should win this. Last Scamp was second in a cheap field at Oaklawn, is in form and figures next best. Spring's Here won twice at Oaklawn, but recent races have been very poor.

Best bet—Watersplash.

Cienca May 'Kick Over Cart' And Win Pimlico Preakness

CIENCIA HERSELF

Buddy Hirsch Says Filly Will Be Named Supplementary Entry

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 4.—A gallant little filly is all set these spring days to kick over the applecart of turf tradition and dust off the colts of her age in Pimlico's classic Preakness.

It's Ciencia, and after the way she handled the Santa Anita Derby field to win by five lengths the odds aren't so long that she might not turn out to be another Regret or Nellie Morse.

She's out at Belmont and Buddy Hirsch, her trainer, said today that his job right now is "to keep her on edge." He breezes her frequently, but for the most part Ciencia is taking things easy.

The daughter of Cohort—Science isn't eligible for the Derby down in Kentucky—and thereby hangs a tale.

Max Hirsch, father of Buddy, who is down in South Carolina, had this to say:

"If all goes well she will be named as a supplementary entry (that costs $1,500) in the Preakness.

"The one thing I regret about the Derby is that she might have been the only filly to win except for Regret. There's a case of two regrets.

Strong Threat

It's a stout filly that can run successfully with colts in the spring—they're "liable to do anything," said Buddy—but Ciencia may be able to handle the so-called stronger sex.

She's well made with a big chest and strong hind quarters and she's well bred to boot—bred to stay and run all day.

Nellie Morse is the only filly ever to win the Preakness and the Pimlico Oaks—but Ciencia may make it two. Rhine Maiden won the Preakness, but she didn't have the Oaks to her credit.

It was back in '24 in the mud that Nellie Morse showed the boys the way home.

Judge 'Forgets' Wedding, Talks Of Race Horses

Hot Springs, Ark., April 4 (AP).—The judge who officiated at the marriage of Clifford Martin let his mind wander, in the opinion of the best man.

T. P. Martin, race-track jockey, was best man for his brother last night.

"Well, as the wedding ends, we're all standing there and expecting the judge to congratulate the couple or kiss the bride—when he turns to me and says, 'T. P., that sure was a great ride you gave Wise Barrister out there Saturday.'"

4 Homers Feature Maryland's 24-5 Victory Over Vermont

Eight Runs In 2d Stop Competition

Terps Gather 24 Hits In 7-Inning Game; Mondorff Holds Foe To 7 Scattered Hits

Runs rattled over the plate like buckshot yesterday afternoon as the University of Maryland nine swamped Vermont's barnstorming troupe, 24-5, at College Park.

The Terps pounced on Ancil Belardinelli for eight runs in the second inning to clinch the ball game. Making certain of victory, however, they added more in clusters of four, five and four in the succeeding innings.

Maryland accumulated 24 hits during the seven-inning game, including two home runs by "Sherry" Robertson and one each authored by Hugh Keller and Adam Bengoechea.

Pershing Mondorff, on the other hand, held the New Englanders to seven hits, well scattered with the exception of three bunched four hits, and with the timely assistance of Johnson's error pushed over four runs. That made it sort of a moral victory and the heat of Maryland's blistering batting attack, plus chill breezes whistling over the field made them willing to call it a day in the seventh.

Maryland Trackmen Meet Dartmouth

The University of Maryland track squad makes its outdoor debut of the year this afternoon, meeting strong Dartmouth in Byrd Stadium at 4 o'clock.

Possessed of considerable strength in the sprints and middle and long distance races, Maryland is expected to make a good showing against the recent decisive conqueror of Virginia, defending Southern Conference champion. A victory for the Terps appears remote, however, as last season, they do not have a single man who can be counted on for points in the field events.

day of it against the Reds at Tampa, but the wildness he displayed was his first trace of noncontrol and Harris was not particularly dismayed. "He has a good curve and fast one, and he wasn't missing the corners by much. He had one of those days that even the best pitchers encounter."

Noticeable, however, is a loss in the esteem in which Harris had held big Roberto Ortiz. The Nats' manager is not nearly as enthusiastic about the chances of converting the hard-throwing Cuban into a pitcher. "He has lots to learn," said Harris today. "He may never make it, but on the chance that he might we're going t keep him with the club."

Notes of the Nats

Even his fellow teammates are talking about the horrible batting slump of Jimmy Wasdell and wondering if the Nats are prepared to string along with him this season . . . Within the past few days Sammy West has been playing the bag in infield practice and there is a suspicion that he may end up as the club's first sacker . . . Bobby Estalella's slump of the last two days is not causing the same concern as Wasdell's . . . "Estalella has a great batting stroke. He'll hit," said Harris . . . "All hard swingers like Bobby strike out more often than the fellows who merely slap the ball for their hits. Look at Foxx and Ruth and Gehrig and the rest of them." . . . Cecil Travis was in uniform today for the first time in nearly two weeks . . . In deference to his recent siege of influenza, Travis merely played catch and will do no vigorous practicing for another week . . . "Not a chance," said Clark Griffith when asked if the Nats would make a trade for Rudy York and convert him into a first baseman.

Roosevelt's Interhigh Entry Works Hard on Its Offense

Post Staff Photos—Del Vecchio.

Roosevelt's Diamond Hopes Rise

Moving Eastern Into Other Division Helps Riders' Chances

(This is the fourth of a series of articles discussing the prospects of each of the seven baseball teams entered in the annual Interhigh race which starts April 21.)

By Bill Burnett.

To the casual observer, and to even Coach Herman Littman, whose observations aren't so casual, Roosevelt's chances of moving up from its 1938 runner-up spot to the interhigh title this year seem particularly bright. Moving Eastern, the only team which was able to beat the Riders last season, into another division where it will not be bothersome until the championship playoff helped the team more than a little.

But the greatest boon to Roosevelt is the return of most of its 1938 nine for another year. Coach Littman can wave an experienced man into every position on the field except third base, and behind the plate he has three veteran catchers at his command.

Scarcity of Pitchers

Like every other coach in the series, however, Littman has a scarcity of tested throwing arms. The one letterman from last year, Jack Lyon, will probably draw the opening assignment against Woodrow Wilson, and he can be depended upon for two or three other games, but there's a limit to even the power of a high school pitcher.

That's why Littman and his team look with pleasure on Eddie Vermillion, a husky right-hander who formerly hurled for Tech. Several other novices have turned up, too, including Bill Meikeljohn, Tom Marcellino and Aaron Siegel, and things might look worse on the mound.

That big stick that Hymie Perlo regularly carried up to the plate and wrecked the weak rightfield fences in most of the parks, will once again be in use by the Riders, though Jack Smith, another powerful batter, was lost by graduation. Perlo is the first string catcher, and Bill Hutchinson and Don Keller both have had considerable experience.

Twins Return

The Robertson twins, Bill and Jim, will hold out at shortstop and second, as last year, and their understudies will be Moe Wagman and Bill Fahey, respectively. Leonard Eiker came back for another year at first base, and if he slips Coach Littman can use Tommy Howard.

The "hot corner" job, for which no last year's man turned out, will be up for competition between Ernest Vitale and Tom Robertson, both fast and improving fielders.

Al Miller, Danny Boothe and Byron Waters lead the outfield candidates, each having earned his letter last year, and two converted gridders, Bill Lewis and Bob Floyd, have looked good enough in practice to take over if any one of the foregoing falters.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

RUNYON

We see where a gentleman who is one of the social lights of Palm Beach operates a retail liquor bar and still retains entree into the best society of that high-toned resort, and we want to say that we deem this tardy justice to an occupation that once took all the worst of it socially speaking.

In the days before prohibition in this country, a fellow who retailed liquor was called a saloonkeeper, and as such he was, in most communities, more or less of a social pariah. He might be the nicest fellow in the world, but there was such a general knock out against his business that the best circles played the chill for him.

This was especially true of small communities where the saloonkeeper's traffic often reacted not only against himself but against his wife and children. As a kid, we can remember when the offspring of families in trade or professions were warned not to have any truck with the children of saloonkeepers, which warning naturally made association with the latter all the more desirable.

The title Saloonkeeper carried a certain odium. A saloonkeeper was invariably cartooned in the newspapers as a big, bloated, brutish-looking fellow standing behind his bar in an apron, with diamonds sparkling on his fingers and from his shirt bosom, and that depiction was no boost socially, to say the least. There was a popular impression that the saloonkeeper was in league with all the forces of political evil and of crime.

Even a Pariah

Unfortunately, in some cases that was true, but there were many good, honest fellows among the saloons. However, no matter how nicely a saloonkeeper tried to conduct his business, keeping his premises clean and selling only the best of liquor and trying to prevent his customers from drinking too much, he was thrown into the bag of public opinion along with the saloonkeepers who made no pretense of conducting anything more than downright dives.

No matter how much the honest saloonkeeper contributed to public charity or how much good he did privately, he generally had to take the same rap as the bad ones. That was among the many things that made saloonkeeping a tough game in the old days—that and listening to the drunks.

Almost every saloonkeeper we ever knew—and we knew many a one—was always talking vaguely of wanting to get out of the business and into something else. Usually it was on account of his family. Sometimes even the dive keepers talked that way. We used to listen mighty sympathetically because a good listener stood a good chance of getting one on the house.

"Hotel Owners" Pure

What we never could understand in those days was the way people differentiated socially between a corner saloonkeeper and a fellow who ran a hotel in which there was a saloon that he usually also owned. Moreover, it is our recollection that wholesale liquor dealers, too, had a different social status from the saloonkeepers. We

Anacostia Nine Defeats Alexandria

District High School Scores 12-3 Victory Over Virginians

Alexandria, Va., April 4.—Anacostia High School batsmen made good use of the wildness of two opposing hurlers and errors afield to win their opening game of the season from Episcopal High, 12-3, in a loosely played game here today. It was the first home game for the Maroons, who opened their season yesterday in Washington with a 6-3 victory over Georgetown Prep.

Art Faircloth, veteran Anacostia hurler, limited Episcopal to four well-scattered hits, and after his mates jumped off to an early lead, he was never in any real danger. He had trouble in finding the plate during the early innings, when he allowed all three Episcopal runs.

Relief to Face Hurlers Who Have Control, Says Brooklyn Rookie

Reiser's Leg Injury Puts Crimp in His Career After Brilliant Start

St. Louis Lad, Who Plays Shortstop, Star Of Grapefruit Loop

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 4.—It was quite a relief to face pitchers who had everything under control instead of those who hit you when you didn't hit them, and this fact accounts in some measure for the spectacular batting spree of Pete Reiser, the unscheduled Brooklyn rookie, this spring.

The 19-year-old St. Louis lad sat on a bench in the locker room and rubbed a sore leg thoughtfully. He had just been removed from a game after registering his eighth-straight hit. He went too far too fast in scoring from first on a double and pulled a leg muscle.

"The big difference in batting here and against the Northern League pitchers," he explained, "is that the pitchers here have better control. You can stand up to the plate with more confidence. We had some pretty fast pitchers up there, but you didn't know whether the ball would hit the bat or your head. I got 18 home runs with Superior last year, but the pitchers got a draw out of it at that. They hit me 18 times.

Reiser, a switch hitter who can throw well with either hand, was the sensation of the Grapefruit League, getting eight hits and three walks before they finally got him out.

He wasn't on the Dodge roster, but Manager Leo Durocher invited him to the Clearwater camp "because the kid wanted to see Florida and I wanted someone to relieve me at shortstop occasionally." For a while it looked like the relief might be permanent. However, the law of averages finally caught up with Reiser, but not before he had shown enough stuff to possibly earn himself a place on the squad.

The boy grew up on the St. Louis sandlots, and as a loyal Cardinal fan picked as a hero a classy shortstop named Durocher. His other hero was an older brother, now dead, and it was an attempt to imitate his brother, a southpaw, that made Pete, a natural right hander, ambidextrous.

His more recent history is fairly well known. Briefly, he was signed by the Cardinals, and after brief terms with Springfield, Mo.; New Iberia, Union Springs and Newport, Ark., in 1937, was declared a free agent when Commissioner K. M. Landis investigated Cardinal affairs a year ago.

He signed with Dayton, but was released to Superior. The Dodgers bought him for $100 and had him ticketed for the Elmira camp at Macon, Ga., when Durocher decided to let the boy see how oranges grow.

Bowden, Friedman Fight Monday

Held over from this week's postponed card, Jim Bowden and Jake Friedman will box the 6-round semifinal on Monday night's charity ring show featuring Willie Reddish and Jim Howell in the feature bout at the Arena. The boys are heavyweights.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn also announced that another bout originally scheduled last Monday, involving Buddy Thomas and John Kaplovich, a couple of hustling middlewights. All in all, the program closely resembles one assembled for the unfilled date, and shapes up as a fairly good evening of fisticuffing.

A sizable portion of the gate receipts will be donated to the Belleville Industrial School and Widows and Orphans Home, a charitable institution that has the indorsement of civic leaders. The home prepares orphaned colored boys for a position in life, teaching agriculture, printing and other trades. It also prepares candidates for the ministry.

Baer-Nova Fight In Yankee Stadium

New York, April 4 (AP).—Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, announced today the heavyweight battle between Max Baer and Lou Nova, California title contenders, will be held June 1 in the Yankee Stadium.

The bout was originally scheduled for May 25 in the Madison Square Garden bowl, but Jacobs agreed to the change in both date and site on request of Ray Carlen, Nova's manager.

Joe Turner Unearths Lengthy Specimen on Philadelphia Trip

Uncle Joe Turner, Washington's one-man wrestling trust, returned from an ivory-hunting expedition to Philadelphia yesterday, beaming happily over his luck in bagging one of the prize catches of his ivory-hunting career, a 7 foot 2 inch specimen of matman.

As Uncle Joe pointed out, a 7 foot 2 inch catch, is rare indeed. Matmen come in all weights, but not in assorted lengths, and when a promoter bags one over 7 feet he can light up a fresh cigar with the feeling of satisfaction. The prize also weighs a healthy 280 pounds, so the fans will have no squawk on that score.

Uncle Joe identified his prize as Kazinmirz Symkowsky, although there may be an extra z, y or w scattered in there somewhere—he isn't exactly confident of his spelling in the matter; but he is certain he'll please the fans. The gent with the alphabet soup handle is all muscle, below the ears as well as above, and Turner will wager a boxer or two against anything you have handy that Kazansockem, or whatever it is, reaches stardom in the near future.

Zazanrazanrockem—there it goes again—will be turned loose against Jim Wright in a 30-minute preliminary brawl to the Jack Hader-Red Ryan feature tomorrow night. A chap with a pronouncable name like Wright seems to have little chance against the aforementioned opponent, and wrestling fans are forewarned to look over the new candidate carefully before risking their hard earned potatoes betting against him.

The complete card for tomorrow includes George Pencheff vs. Ernie Powers; Dropkick Murphy against Tom Mahoney; Nanjo Singh and his arch-rival, Nick Campofreda.

Favorites Win In Squash Play

Favorites continued to win as the annual District A. A. U. squash racquets advanced to the quarter-final round last night at the University Club.

John H. Pratt, No. 2 ranking player of the club, and P. W. Snyder, of Bolling Field, manufactured the feature match of the evening, Pratt winning after five gruelling games, all but one of which went into extra points.

Pratt took the first by an 18-15 margin, but dropped the next two as Snyder rallied, 17-18, 15-16, then came back to close out the match in the two remaining games. He took the fourth in regulation figures, 15-12, but had a hard time clinching the laurels in the final, which went to 18-17.

C. E. Waldon defeated R. G. Wilson, 3—1; H. L. Stinson defeated W. Siemmons, 3—2; R. D. Graves won from C. D. Thompson, by default; W. G. Galliher defeated W. B. Henderson, 3—0; W. M. Macomber defeated R. Blumberg, 3—0; Dr. H. G. Moulton defeated H. H. Sargeant, 3—0; John H. Pratt defeated P. W. Snyder, 3—2.

Bearing Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

The Government bought cotton from the farmers at nine and is selling it back to 'em at five. If that means office hours it's all right. But if it means money it's bad business.

The Southern States have 28 Senators and 3,000,000 bales of cotton in Congress. Which indicates that representation with subsidies is not tyranny.

It looks like prosperity depends on playing the middle against both ends which never meet.

Ramblers Beat Baron Six, 5-4; Even Ice Series

Philadelphia, April 4 (U.P.).—The Philadelphia Ramblers evened their series with the Cleveland Barons tonight by turning in a 5-to-4 victory in the second contest of the International American Hockey League championship.

The game went into three extra periods before the Ramblers were able to break a 4-4 deadlock at the end of the regular time. Cleveland won the first of the play-off games.

felt that since they all sold liquor they should all be on the same plane, but of course we had nothing to do with drawing the social lines.

With the coming of prohibition and the abolition of the old saloon the bootlegger and the speakeasy proprietor appeared, and under certain social circumstances they both had more social standing than ever the old saloonkeeper enjoyed, though both were distinctly illegal, while he was within the law.

In fact, some of those bootleggers of the prohibition era were so social that if they had held on to their money they might have established in the society of the years to come a status for their descendants comparable to that now enjoyed by the descendants of old-time financial pirates, who got their money no less illegally than the bootleggers—but kept it.

It is a curious thing about those bootleggers, that not more than half a dozen of the biggest operators of the prohibition period have a dime today and some of them must have handled millions and millions of dollars. We suppose we should remember the words of the philosopher: "They ain't no hand-holts on a wrong dollar." Still, what about those financial pirates?

The Tavern Is Genteel

With the repeal of prohibition came the genteel version of the old saloon that we know today, but without the name or the swinging doors. We think it saves many a crick in the backs of doting wives who used to have to stoop down to peer in under the swinging doors to see if John was hanging on the mahogany.

We call these new establishments cafes, or just bars. The proprietor is not a saloonkeeper, of course. He is a cafe man, or a bar owner. In general, his social standing is much better than that of the old saloonkeeper, but until this Palm Beach incident you could not say that he was actually in society. Our great regret is that some of the retail liquor dealers we knew back down the years are not now alive to see the way their business has at last been properly vindicated. They would have loved Palm Beach society.

Bill Wolfe Is High In Columbia Loop

Bill Wolfe, of Jacob's Transfer, rolled a 154 for high individual game of the Columbia Heights League at Arcadia Alleys last night. Fred Murphy, Hessick Coal, had high individual set, 411, and Daly Food Shop high team game and high team set, 657 and 1,768.

Kaschub Wins Stake

Rolling from scratch, Herby Kaschub won the Patent Office handicap bowling sweepstakes yesterday with a 377 three-game set. Ernie Norwig, with a handicap of 12 and a total of 376, was second, and Meredith Johnson, with a handicap of 30, shot 376 for third place.

Consolation high games were won by A. Levow, with 128, and Percy Patrick, with 130.

1939 Duke Captain Will Be Johnson

Durham, N. C., April 4 (U.P.).—Allen (Sweet Pea) Johnson, fiery watchfob guard from Lexington, N. C., tonight was elected captain of the 1939 Duke University football team.

Johnson, a member of the "Seven Iron Dukes" whose play sent Duke through an undefeated season and a close tilt in the Rose Bowl with Southern California, is rated as one of the most spirited players on the Blue Devil squad by his teammates.

Berg Beats Galiano

New York, April, 4 (AP).—Jackie "Kid" Berg, veteran English welterweight, decisively outpointed Pete Galiano, of Baltimore, in an 8-round bout before 3,500 fans at the Broadway Arena tonight. Berg weighed 147¼, Galiano 141¾.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

The Great Outdoors

New York, April 4.—For the most part I can take my indoor sports or leave them alone, and generally speaking I would rather leave them alone. That was one of the most pleasant parts of being in the Southland during the merry month of March. But it seems my timing is off—I came back too soon.

VIDMER

At least the badminton tournament is over, for I saw a picture of Dr. Edward S. Elliott presenting a trophy. And the squash racketeers must have finished their foolishness for the year because they had a dinner the other night. I did very well to duck the windup of the basketball season and the hockey campaign was practically over when I returned. Tonight saw the end of the intercollegiate chess matches and there won't be another bike race until May, by which time the ball clubs, the golf clubs, the race tracks and the other activities will be in full swing.

But there still seems to be one indoor sport left on the calendar and, of course, it would be just my luck to run right into it. They are starting the East-West polo matches at Squadron A Armory Wednesday night and there seems nothing can be done about it.

Polo All Right in Place

Of course, polo is all right in its place but I've always felt that its place was out on the green fields of Meadow Brook or some similar stretch of turf where the horses can really gallop and the spectators sit in the sun. Fortunately there are a lot of people who don't feel about it as I do, however, and to a greater group than ever witnessed a squash match, but not such a crowd as gathers for a baseball game, the East-West matches apparently hold considerable interest.

Anyway that was the impression I got from a couple of addicts who talked me into mentioning this matter at all.

Frankly, I tried to turn the conversation into other channels, and when they insisted in pursuing the subject I tried my best to laugh off their enthusiasm. But in the end I had to listen and, I suppose, in a measure I absorbed some information.

In case you knew as little about the East-West matches as I did in the beginning, I might as well tell you that it is a series of two-out-of-three games between the senior champions of the Eastern circuit and the senior champions of the West. They have been playing tournaments in the two sections for the honor and privilege of meeting in these games. A field artillery team from Chicago and the Evergreen Farms trio of New York won the distinction.

A Rich Man's Sport?

There is one matter connected with this intersectional series, however, which strikes me as being really interesting. Polo always has been tainted by the tag of being a rich man's sport. As a matter of fact it does run into the upper brackets for those who play it because even with the prevailing prices of automobiles and airplanes, no one is giving any horses away, and besides you can keep a car in a garage cheaper than you can stable a polo pony.

But from the spectators' point of view, polo should no longer be considered an expensive sport. As a matter of fact, you can see this world's series of the indoor arenas cheaper than you can see a regular baseball game in the big league. That was one of the things my enthusiastic friends were stressing.

"Listen," said one, when I mentioned stuffed shirts, the social register and a Bradstreet rating. "Listen, that's a lot of foolishness about the public being shut out from polo games and it's high time someone was putting the idea across that polo is one of the most exciting games in the world to watch, easy to follow, easy to understand and a grandstand seat costs less than the same seat at any sport you care to mention."

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

AIN'T GONNA RAIN NO MO'—so far as the Powhatan Roof Garden will be concerned during the coming season, Manager Daniel Wathey, of the Roger Smith Hotel, tells us that the roof garden gayeties will be transferred downstairs to the air-conditioned Cafe Caprice whenever Jupiter Pluvius starts to act up. The roof garden is now getting its annual redecoration and a new bandstand is being installed. With Caprice available as an alternate spot, it's possible that the roof will open earlier than usual.

"Miss Washington" Turns Stylist: Helen Greene, the "Miss Washington" of the Atlantic City beauty pageant of a couple of seasons back, also a notable night spot singer, is taking over the management of the Hour Glass style shows. There'll be a fashion revue at H. G. every Wednesday, beginning April 12. Helen will act dually as mannequin and mistress of ceremonies.

EASTER CONCERT: Not exactly night spot news, but very thrilling is the announcement that the Metropolitan Memorial Choir of 40 voices, directed by Robert Frederick Freund, will sing in the ballroom at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street next Sunday evening. This top flight musical event will be for the delectation of dinner guests at "2400."

Singer Tremendous! Troika's tsarina, Mrs. Helen Hamilton—all aglow with enthusiasm—calls to tell us that Luba Malina, continental operatic star, will join the new Troika show on Saturday. The Malina has starred in recent Shubert revivals of the "Fire Fly" "Countess Maritza" and "Rio Rita;" also appeared at Manhattan's Waldorf-Astoria, Versailles and Hollywood. Maestro Sasha Lukas vows that La Malina will "set Troika on fire."

TENOR PLUS BARYTONE: Though Bill Brady (Shoreham Blue Room) is singing tenor this week, he's going to do a barytone aria next week—the "Largo of Factotum," from the "Barber of Seville." Bill's really a Washington boy who got his vocal start by winning a "Bing Crosby Contest" at the Capitol Theater a couple of seasons ago.

Does anyone know a song called "There's a Light at the Cross Road?" If so, please tell Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room. He's had a letter from an elderly couple of Phoenix, Ariz., asking him to play it on the novachord because it was their favorite song when they were courting 47 years ago. They used to sing this ballad to harmonium accompaniment and want Milton to play it on the novachord a la harmonium.

CANDID CAMERA: Mayflower Lounge: Robert Montgomery recuperating after testifying at the Capitol; Bruce Cabot, without a care in the world; Kay Kyser, in for a few minutes between shows at the Earle . . . Shoreham Terrace: Gertrude Lawrence (in early for her National Theater appearance next week) sipping Martinis as she listens to Barnee rehearsing in the adjoining Blue Room. Miss Lawrence was the first Terrace customer of the year . . . In Shaz-Zad: Peggy Gibbins, daughter of Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins, with Publicist Bob Rodenburg. Ruth Dove and Baron Paul Schell. Henry Seay with a big party, including blondely lovely Kitty Fuqua and Mason de Castle. . . . At Mayfair: Representative and Mrs. Arthur Anderson, of Missouri; Representative and Mrs. Fred Bradley, of Michigan. All enjoying Leo and Louanna's melodizing of "Wishing," the haunting new tune from "Love Affair" . . . At Metronome: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Le Baron, she no end pretty in pale pink, dancing beautifully to Paul Kain's version of "Flame," one of the newer tangos. Debutante Maizie Howard, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, with a big party of young folks that included Joanna Huntington, Harriet Hart, "Flick" Hoxton, Fred Mechlin, Cutler Collins. Miss Collins Brown, of this group, delighted Maestro Paul by singing with the band.

Lotus startler-of-the-week is the Natheno Brothers' act (right from the Casa Manana, too). These amazing fellas play the fiddle and mandolin while one of them stands on his head on the other's head. That's the best way we can describe it. Perhaps we should draw diagrams.

Wayne and Maye, now swing-stepping gayly in the Lotus "Blossom Festival"

REMARKABLE DOIN'S: At Hi Hat: "Chuck" Palmer's Russian masquerade when he warbles (huh?) "I Played Fiddle For the Czar." He's the complete Muscovite to moustachios and astrakhan turban.

At Bamboo Gardens: The rat-a-tat-tat stepping of "Bunny" West, one of the most mischievous of those "Blonde Aristocrats." Also that jockey production number, dedicated to good luck at Bowie.

At Montmartre Noctambule: That full hour of piano-ing Debussy, Chaminade, Tschaikowski and such like rare music by Proprietor Felian Garzia.

At the Pirates' Den: The buccaneers' big roll call introducing you individually to all 40 of Capt. Dan Dickerman's "Brethren of the Coast."

At the Brown Derby: The monkey-business by that very quaint monkey that Al Simmonds has just added to the Brown Derby Zoo. Al's also acquired a Boston bull pup named "Buster" and intends to buy some pigeons. Has anyone got a wildcat they don't need?

At River Bend: That great super-special bargain—the "Piggy Party," that they are tossing this evening. All the beer you can drink, all the tasty food you can eat. All for one dollar—either in change or folding money.

At Anchor Room: Matt Windsor's flashy rendition of his own number, "No, No, My Mamma Says No," which, you must know, is now a topside favorite in New York's Stork Club.

At the Uptown Cocktail Lounge: Those triple-potent double cocktails compounded so artfully by Mixologist Bill Monroe.

Slovaks, Magyars In New Clash

Bratislava, Slovakia, April 4 (INS).—A new Slovak-Hungarian border incident near Kolonica in East Slovakia was reported in Bratislava tonight. A number of casualties were inflicted on both sides, but official estimates were not announced.

The new clash flared despite a frontier agreement announced only yesterday by the Slovak government.

Experts Make Cheap Wool From Milk

Chemical Society Told of New Process At Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 4.—Methods to make wool from skim milk, in order to put wool goods within easier reach of the poor, have been completed by United States Government chemists.

The methods, plans and prospects were described to the American Chemical Society here today by E. O. Whittier and S. P. Gould, of the United States Bureau of Dairy Industry, who took out the first American patent for this artificial wool last December.

The first step in turning skim milk into wool is souring. The soured mass is dried, then dissolved in alkali, containing metals and fatty acids.

This mass is forced through tiny holes in a platinum disc. The strings that emerge pass into a bath of acid, formaldehyde and either salts or sugars, which toughens them. Afterward they are treated with oils and other substances to make them flexible and to add further strength.

The present result, the report stated, is a wooly fiber which has the poor tensile strength that rayon had 30 years ago when first made. The milk wool is weak when wet, but it does not shrink as much as real wool.

A peacetime high explosive, which in present form is not useful for war, was announced to the society as a "safety" development.

It is made of zinc and ammonia, two non-explosive substances, with nitrogen added. Other metals can be substituted for zinc.

The explosive was made by the Hercules Powder Co. of Wilmington, Del., which collaborated with Purdue University to invent natural gas dynamite, another new high explosive announced at the present meeting.

Charles Wesley Dunn, counsel for food manufacturers, told the society the new Federal food and drug act, the strongest of its kind in the world, "places the practice of medicine by drugs more or less under the Food and Drug Administration."

War Clouds Start Battle Over Copper

Am. Smelting Cuts Price ½ Cent But Others Do Not Follow

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 4.—Possibility of a big war demand for copper entered today into a tussle between buyers and sellers over a general reduction in the domestic price of the metal.

The American Smelting & Refining Co., in a surprise move, late yesterday cut the quotation for home delivery to 10¾ cents a pound from 11¼. It had held at the higher figure since last October. Meanwhile, the market had been in a deadlock, with large consumers refraining from extensive buying and living off supplies accumulated previously.

A canvass of leading producers showed them holding to 11¼ cents in face of the cut by the smelting company. Expressing doubt that there would be any general cut, some copper men representing the producing side said they felt reasonably confident low stocks in hands of fabricators and rapidly increasing armament expenditures throughout the world soon would force large-scale buying.

The contest between copper sellers and buyers excited wide interest in financial circles because it was believed to represent a general situation in business today. Inventories in many fields have been reported in a steady decline while purchasing was held to a hand-to-mouth basis waiting, in part, for an answer to whether there would be war in Europe. There were rumors in copper circles today that Germany and Poland, among other big consumers, had expanded inquiries for metal in this market.

Big Board Stocks Drop 5 Billions During Month

New York, April 4 (AP).—The effect on securities markets of the succession of war scares during March was reflected today in New York Stock Exchange figures showing a drop of more than $5,000,000,000 in market value of listed shares during the month.

At the end of March the total value of listed shares was $40,921,074,970 compared with $46,270,987,418 at the end of the previous month. Stock exchange circles said it was one of the biggest slumps in a year, as recorded by the monthly figures.

A year ago listed shares had a total market value of $31,858,461,871.

Local Bankers At Parley Today On Maloney Act

A full representation of Washington brokers and investment bankers will attend a 1 o'clock meeting at the Southern Hotel in Baltimore today to consider the proposed Maloney act organization, and the rules and regulations under which this organization will operate. It will be recalled that the Maloney act was passed about a year ago, and is the most recent of a series of laws which regulate the investment banking industry. While this particular law applies to the so-called over-the-counter business, a large number of stock exchange houses are affected since they do business in this field as well as on the exchanges.

For many weeks a committee representing the banking interests has been working with officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission in the preparation of a proposed set of rules which would have a far-reaching influence in the banking world. Henry H. Egly, a former partner of Dillon, Read & Co., has headed a division in the Securities and Exchange Commission which is actively studying the problem. It is expected that nearly every firm in Washington and in Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia will be represented in the Baltimore meeting.

Benjamin H. Griswold, jr., of Alex. Brown & Sons, will preside. One of the important matters under consideration is whether or not there shall be a paid president of the new association.

Banks Increase Business Loans

By the Associated Press.

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks increased for the third consecutive week in the seven days ended March 29.

Banks in 101 leading cities reported to the Federal Reserve Board their business loans advanced $9,000,000 to a total of $3,814,000,000 in the week. Banks in the Chicago district led the increase with a boost of $16,000,000, which was offset by small decreases in some other areas.

Penn. R. R. Plans New St. Louis Flyer

Philadelphia, April 4.—The quickest train service from St. Louis to Baltimore and Washington, over any route, will be established Sunday, April 30, when the Pennsylvania Railroad's "Spirit of St. Louis" will inaugurate new and faster schedules to its Eastern terminals.

The running time to Baltimore will be cut to 19 hours and 33 minutes and to Washington to 20 hours and 25 minutes, with approximately a half hour's earlier arrival in each city, affording a materially longer morning for the transaction of business or social and other engagements.

Telephone Gains

New York, April 4 (AP).—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today reported a gain in March of 81,450 telephones in service in the Bell System. The gain in March last year totaled 36,700.

General Motors Made 44.8% Of 1938 Autos

Chrysler Next With 25%, Ford 20.5%, All Others 9.7%

New York, April 4.—New passenger automobiles registered in the United States declined from a record high of 3,880,000 in 1929 to 1,096,000 in 1932. This slump was followed by a five-year period of expansion with automobile registrations rising to 3,484,000 in 1937. This expansion was halted by a severe setback in 1938, with registrations declining to 1,891,000 cars, a decrease of 45.7 per cent from the 1937 volume, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today.

Every manufacturer of passenger cars suffered from the slump in 1938. Combined registrations of automobiles manufactured by the three major companies, General Motors, Chrysler and Ford, showed a reduction of 44.7 per cent. Combined registrations of automobiles manufactured by other companies showed a decrease of 53.6 per cent. Registrations of automobiles manufactured by Ford declined 51.0 per cent; Chrysler registrations declined 46.5 per cent; General Motors registrations declined 40.0 per cent.

In 1938, the three major automobile companies made 90.3 per cent of all the new passenger cars registered in the United States as compared with 88.7 per cent in 1937. General Motors sold 44.8 per cent of the total in 1938, Chrysler sold 25.0 per cent, and Ford sold 20.5 per cent.

U.S. Merchant Ship Construction at Peak Since War

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that merchant ship construction in this country was now at the highest point since the World War.

Commander R. S. Field, director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection, disclosed that on February 1, 291 merchant ships, aggregating 546,705 tons, were under construction or contract for construction.

"This notable increase in construction of merchant vessels is in sharp contrast with figures of past years when few American boats were being built," Commander Field said.

Commander Field said the United States now has 1,339 merchant ships of more than 2,000 gross tons each, compared with 2,540 for Great Britain, the world leader in merchant marine. During February, he added, 82 new American merchant ships, totaling 26,752 tons, were put into service.

Late Rally Offsets Waves of Selling
Leaders Reach New Lows in Early Trading
Treasury Bonds Firm, Rail Issues Lower

New York, April 4.—Lower security prices in London today encouraged further liquidation in our stock market and two heavy waves of selling carried prices of leading stocks off 1 to 4 points to a new low for the year. There was a sharp reversal in the afternoon, however, and while all the lost ground could not be recovered, the Street was encouraged by the rebound and brokers reported a good type of support.

In some compilations of averages on stock prices, the Munich lows of last September were broken but in our compilation of 100 representative stocks, the composite held above the Munich level, aided by the 30 rails, which were about two points above last September. The average of 70 industrials, however, sank below the Munich point.

According to the followers of the Dow theory it was not necessary to break September's figure in order to secure confirmation of a bear market, this having been done last week when the January low point was exceeded. On the basis of this theory the preceding bull market, therefore, lasted only from March 31, 1938, to November 10, 1938, making it one of the shortest on record.

It is quite possible according to this theory, to have the market rally substantially from its present level without any change in the long-term trend being indicated. Encouraged by the type of support which developed in late trading today, some of those who regard this as a bear market were nevertheless looking for a technical rebound that might make up 30 per cent of the latest decline.

Chrysler Heads Activity

Activity on the early declines and the later partial recovery centered on the familiar pivotal leaders, the two most active being Steel and Chrysler, with a turnover of 39,000 each, the former closing down 1¾ and the latter 2⅝. Steel's opening of 30½ was its best price of the day, from which is dropped quickly to a low of 48¼, but rallied to close at 50. Bethlehem was off 2½. Republic a fraction and General Motors a point.

The Street does not regard foreign influences as the major consideration in the current market, although it is still an important dark cloud on the horizon. The chief worry at the moment is the state of domestic business. The first quarter was a distinct disappointment, after the strong close in 1938 and the good start made in January. The immediate question for the speculator is whether or not present prices for securities have discounted the decline in business, and whether that decline can be broken in the near future.

Bonds Irregular

Listed bond trading reflected the same unsettlement today which afflicted the equities section. United States Treasury issues and best corporate bonds were firm on the quarter-statement bank disclosures of vast amounts of idle cash. But other bonds tumbled, and scores of lows for the year were reached on declines from fractions to 4 points. Foreign dollar bonds were down with the rest of the speculative issues. Turnover was $7,080,000.

Medium-priced railroad bonds were most vulnerable to the modest selling. With buyers reluctant, losses of 1 to 2 points were numerous, and occasional declines ranged to 4 points. Borderline and default rails also were lower. Holding company issues and convertible bonds of all sorts reflected the drop in equities. Local tractions, amusement bonds, communications issues and others all took the easy downward course of the day.

Foreign Issues

In the foreign section Australian and Canadian bonds held well, despite the war reports from Europe, but Scandinavians suffered another sinking spell. German bonds were quiet, while holders awaited the decision on the Dawes loan interest payment. Italian and Japanese obligations did not vary greatly. Latin-American bonds were marked sharply lower, whether in the interest paying category or in default.

In the Treasury list demand was good for long and medium term obligations, for the quarterly statements of the local banks made it clear that much buying might be done if the institutions cared to try employment of the idle funds. Gains ranged to 10/32 point, and a few fresh highs were recorded. Small losses appeared in a few issues. Telephone debentures were in demand, apparently on similar considerations. Best grade power and light bonds were firm, but some industrials were soft.

North Carolina Gold Mine Plans Custom Operation

Charlotte, N. C., April 4.—With resumption of operations on an enlarged scale at the Capps Hill gold mine scheduled to take place within the next 30 days, Charlotte will soon become the gold mining center of this part of the country.

A Charlotte attorney, John James, has been appointed permanent receiver of the Capps Mill mine, which has been idle for some time. The ore mill, according to Mr. James, will be operated on a customs basis. That is, ore from other mines in this section will be shipped basis or a percentage basis. Continued operation, he said, would to Charlotte and milled on a fee liquidate the company, so that the receiver may turn the mine and mill over to the original Capps Hill Gold Mine Co.

Operation of the mill, he said, is assured by the blocking out of bodies or ore in this section. This ore is assayed high enough to make its mining and milling profitable.

March Cotton Trading 2,904,800 Bales

Trading in futures contracts on the three organized cotton exchanges, as reported to the commodity exchange administration, totaled 2,904,800 bales of cotton during March. This compared with 2,285,250 bales in February and 3,472,000 bales in March last year.

A total of 2,504,400 bales was traded on the New York exchange, 395,650 bales on the New Orleans exchange and 4,750 bales on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Am. Smelting Net $1 a Share Higher Than Year Ago

New York, April 4 (AP).—F. H. Brownell, chairman of American Smelting & Refining Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting today the company's earnings in the first two months of this year were at an average rate of $3.63 a common share compared with an average of $2.63 a share in the same period of 1938.

Concerning dividends, Brownell said that if "this higher rate of earnings continues, it seems possible that stockholders might receive common dividends larger than they did last year." Last year's common stock dividends totaled $1.25.

Brownell said he expected an improvement in the future earnings rate since the company's Monterey, Mexico, plant was shut down in January and February. He said the Mexican situation showed much improvement and that the outlook there was encouraging. "I think the end of expropriation is in sight," he asserted.

Steel Operations Dip to 54.7 Per Cent

New York, April 4 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline 1.4 points to 54.7 per cent of capacity, compared with 56.1 per cent last week.

May Options Lead Gain in Wheat Prices

Rise ½ Cent While Other Months Add ¼-Cent Advances

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 4.—Buying of May wheat contracts, some of which was credited by pit brokers to exporters, helped to give wheat prices an upward trend just before the market closed today.

While some traders continued to express concern over the European political situation, particularly in view of weakness in securities prices, developments abroad failed to stimulate any substantial buying. Instead, caution prevailed and the result was a narrow trading market, with buying in connection with commercial transactions in the milling and baking industries offsetting sales attracted by prospects of general grain belt precipitation and private forecasts indicating improved winter wheat conditions.

May wheat led the last hour advance, rising as much as ½ cent while the other contracts were up only ¼ cent. Switching of hedges by elevator interests from May into deferred contracts, and some lifting of hedges presumably following subsidized wheat or flour export sales or domestic business was in evidence.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅛ higher compared with yesterday's finish, May 67⅝@67¾, July 67½@67¾; corn, ½-½ higher, May 47⅞, July, 48⅛; oats, unchanged to ⅛ lower; rye ⅛ off to ¼ up; lard, 10 lower.

Foreign Selling Hits Cotton

New York, April 4 (AP).—Heavy foreign offerings—especially from Bombay and Liverpool—drove cotton futures to net losses of 11 to 13 points today. The selling coincided with Washington reports of a Senate compromise which proposes more than $415,000,000 for additional farm benefits and removal of crop surpluses.

Opening lower in face of improved Liverpool prices, cotton took a downward slant throughout a comparatively active session. Early selling was ascribed by many brokers to the belief the Bankhead bill (passed by the Senate) may meet strong opposition and cotton legislation delayed indefinitely.

Cottonseed Oil

Heavy liquidation carried cottonseed oil futures to net losses of 23 to 27 points today before partial recovery left the final range 19 to 22 points down. Selling was influenced by new seasonal lows in all lard deliveries and continued poor cash oil demand despite recent lowered quotations. Turnover in one of the busiest sessions in days totaled 404 contracts. May ended, 6.47; July, 6.51; September, 6.72; October, 6.73. Crude oil was nominal at 5¼ to 5½ cents in the Southeast and Valley and 5⅛ to 5⅜ in Texas.

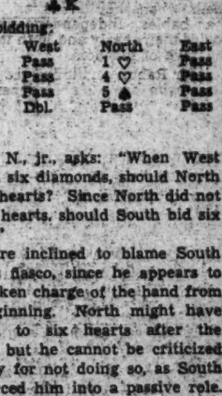
Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

One of the chief causes for losses through bidding is the failure of one player to give his partner either sufficient information or sufficient credit for being able to manage capably his end of the partnership.

Two mild cases of this malady are revealed in today's bidding problems. J. K. N., jr., presents the first, which concerns a small slam at hearts that was played and defeated at six diamonds, doubled. Here are the hands:



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ◇	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

J. K. N., jr., asks: "When West doubled six diamonds, should North bid six hearts? Since North did not bid six hearts, should South bid six hearts?"

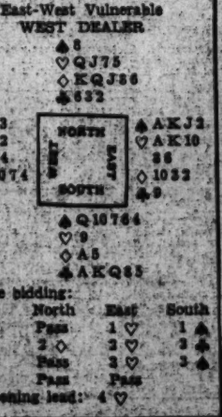
We are inclined to blame South for this fiasco, since he appears to have taken charge of the hand from the beginning. North might have escaped to six hearts after the double, but he cannot be criticized severely for not doing so, as South had forced him into a passive role.

The double raise in hearts, with but three was ill-advised. It would have been better to jump-rebid the diamond suit first. North would undoubtedly rebid his hearts, showing length, and South could then invite a slam at that declaration, confident that hearts would make a strong trump suit.

The hand in today's box is sent by F. C. L., who asks this question: "As between North and South, whose fault was it that the normal contract of three no trump was not reached?"

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable
WEST DEALER



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
Pass	2 ◇	3 ♡	3 ♣
Pass	Pass	3 ♡	3 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♡

South missed a golden opportunity on his hand. The question of failing to reach three no trump dims before the lost chance of doubling East at three hearts.

If South had but passed East's three-heart bid, as he should have, leaving the decision up to North, North could have doubled, and the profit would have been far greater than playing three no trump. East would have been defeated at least three tricks, losing a spade, two hearts, three diamonds and a club.

North's obvious lack of enthusiasm for either one of South's suits should have given him an inkling that North might have length in hearts as well as diamonds.

Even though it can be made, three no trump is not a desirable contract.

Observers at the Ellender "favoritism" hearings view the cases, without exception, as proving one thing: The complete absence of any systematized promotions in the Federal service. This underlies every case Ellender has produced. What he has produced is seen by the observers as only the symptoms of an underlying cause—the absence of any system toward promotions or training or appeals. Each agency makes some sort of stab toward affording appeals and promotions and training, but the systems are uncoordinated and haphazard. The Council of Personnel Administration at the moment is burning the midnight oil to make these systems uniform, and Ellender's revelations may serve to place the heat behind them. Incidentally, the hearings may by indirection serve to strengthen the Council of Personnel Administration by demonstrating the need for it.

Bob Burns Says—

When I was a boy back home I use'ta always dread Spring cleanin' time. That's why I always admired my Uncle Herkimer Hooks. He was sort of a sensitive man and he couldn't stand seein' his wife doin' all that hard work. So he buckled down and made a lot'ta money and he bought his wife a home with every modern convenience that money could buy. There was electric washers, electric ironers, electric sweepers—why, everything that woman had to do was done mechanically by just pushin' a button.

Well, when it comes time for Spring cleanin' Herkimer invited a bunch of us boys to come home with him expectin' to find his wife waitin' for him all fresh and pretty in negligee. Well, when we got there his wife didn't answer the door and we barged in and there she was sittin' in a chair all bedraggled lookin' like she'd been pulled through a knot-hole.

Uncle Herkimer says, "Good Heavens; I bought you everythin' to do your work for you and you look worse than you ever did when you had to do it all yourself. What in the world is the matter?"

His wife looked up and in a weak voice she says, "I just can't help it, Herkimer, I guess I'm all fagged out from button pushing."

Off on His Own

Dictatorship can never be
Mid independent folk and free.
—Old Mother Nature.

If there is any one thing that the people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest value above all else it is their independence. They are born in freedom and freedom is their birthright. They can bear hunger, cold, almost anything, better than they can bear loss of freedom. This love of freedom is implanted in them very early in life by granting them complete independence just as soon as they are able to find their food. At least, it is this way in most cases. So it is that furred and feathered children leave home and the guidance of father and mother at a very early age, some of them when they are hardly more than babies. Independence thus becomes theirs early and with it comes the love of freedom.

Peter Rabbit's children are among those who gain their independence at a very early age, hardly more than babies. And that is a bit odd when you think of it, for they are such helpless little things. Perhaps it is because they are such lively, inquisitive little folk that their mother finds it impossible to keep them together where she can keep an eye on all of them. Perhaps it is because from the time they are born they are accustomed to being left by mother for long periods of time, especially in the daytime. It is done for their own protection, for Mrs. Peter knows well that if she is seen going often to one particular place, that place will sooner or later be investigated. So while the babies are helpless they are safer left unattended under the soft fur blanket with which they are covered save when they must be fed.

So it is not surprising that when jolly, round, red Mr. Sun climbed up in the blue, blue sky one morning he looked down on a very small Rabbit much, very much, farther from the dear Old Briar-patch than would seem at all safe for such a little Rabbit to be. It was the headstrong bunny, the smartest of the five children of Peter and Mrs. Peter. He had assumed his independence. He was off on his own. It had happened that the day before he had slipped out to a patch of clover only a little way from the edge of the Briar-patch. Suddenly Harrier, the Marsh Hawk, had appeared. Instead of running, this smart little bunny flattened himself in the clover and remained motionless. At that very instant one of his brothers, playing at the edge of the dear Old Briar-patch, carelessly ran outside. In a dash he was picked up and carried off by Harrier.

Until then the venturesome little Rabbit in the clover had failed to believe that the big Hawks he saw every day were as dangerous as his mother said they were. Now he knew they were. Also he was smart enough to know that he had done just the right thing in flattening himself in the clover, and with that knowledge was born the feeling of independence.

"I can look out for myself," thought he. "Mother wouldn't let me out here at all if she could help it, but if a fellow never goes out by himself how is he to learn to take care of himself?"

So the next morning just as soon as Mrs. Peter's back was turned he was out in that patch of clover again. At the time he had no intention of going beyond it. He had no intention of leaving home for good. No, indeed; nothing like that entered his head. But sitting up on the farther side of that clover patch he saw some more clover a little beyond. It looked better than the clover he was eating. Of course. That which we have not always looks better than that which we have. Isn't it so?

So he went to find out. And when he had found out that that clover really wasn't any better, he saw some more farther on that might be. He had to find out. And after a while he made a discovery, a most important discovery. It was that he didn't know the way home. He was on his own now, and no mistake about it.

Film Hearings Go on Despite Truce Offer

Hollywood Agent Suggests Plan to End 'Block Booking' Row

By the Associated Press.

A sudden compromise offer from a Hollywood spokesman failed yesterday to halt a Senate committee's stormy hearing on legislation to outlaw "block booking" and "blind selling" of motion pictures.

Arising dramatically after a series of disputes, C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for major producers and distributors, announced they would be willing to let "responsible boards" composed of church and school leaders help select the motion pictures for their communities.

This method, the lawyer said, would attain the objectives of the legislation which seeks to permit the public, through local theater managers, to select entertainment it wishes.

Asks for "Showdown"

"Let's get an agreement quick and lay it on the table," Pettijohn said. "We can save several days time. Let's have a showdown."

Waving to the many women witnesses waiting to testify for church and civic groups, Pettijohn said if they formed the local boards he was certain the producers "will withdraw from any offer what a responsible group doesn't want, and we'll show pictures at fair prices."

Henry R. Atkinson, representing a Boston Chapter of the Motion Picture Research Council, quickly rejected the offer for his groups, saying they "would look with suspicion upon any attempt to settle this matter by negotiation."

Charges "Broken Promises"

Atkinson, one of a long procession of civic and school groups favoring the legislation, said he would cite "13 broken promises of the motion picture industry."

"Nothing is ever done until we come down to Washington with witnesses," Atkinson said.

Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, sponsor of the legislation and chairman of the hearing, also expressed doubt that "local theater boards can be effective when they run head-on into block booking."

U. S. Announces Spinach Is Good For Children

We hate to tell you, kids, but Uncle Sam has taken a hand in this business of eating and he says there's nothing like spinach and cod-liver oil for the fellow who has designs on that shortstop or first base position.

A pamphlet has been issued by the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department in co-operation with the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture called "Well-Nourished Children." It was published in anticipation of May Day—Child Health Day—and lists such "goodies" as milk, vegetables, fruits, whole-grain cereals, fish and—of course—cod liver oil.

"The kinds of foods listed are not only ones that children can have," says the publication, "but mothers who plan their children's meals so that they eat enough of these important foods and a variety in each group can be pretty sure that children are well fed."

So now you know.

C. M. Eichelberger To Be Speaker at 'Stop-Hitler' Rally

Clark M. Eichelberger, national director of the League of Nations Association and chairman of the newly formed American Union for Concerted Peace Efforts, will speak tonight at a "stop Hitler" mass meeting in the National Press Club auditorium.

Scheduled to talk at 8:15, Eichelberger will discuss the neutrality act and proposed changes in America's neutrality legislation. The meeting will also hear Representative John Coffee (Democrat), of Washington; Ralph Bates, British novelist, recently returned from front lines of the Spanish loyalists, and Margaret E. Forsyth, member of the executive board of the Methodist Federation for Social Service. Niels Christensen is chairman of the committee which arranged the program.

Mail Drive Denied Defense by U. S.

District Attorney Pine yesterday refused a Postoffice Department request that one of his staff defend Lionel W. Hodges, 32, of 1507 M street northwest, a mail truck driver accused of negligent homicide.

"It would be unethical and farcical for the District attorney to defend Mr. Hodges when he also has to prosecute him," Pine said. He referred the request to the Department of Justice.

The coroner's jury blamed Hodges for the death of Miss Ella Martin, 66, who was hit by the mail truck.

Trade Commission Says Coercion Used To Restrict Sales

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday it had issued a complaint charging the Wholesale Dry Goods Institute, Inc., New York, its officers, members and directors, with acts and practices "tending to prevent competition and create a monopoly."

The complaint contended the institute was organized "for the ostensible purpose of improving trade practices" and "furthering better trade relations" but instead operated to "prevent and hinder manufacturers of dry goods and kindred lines of merchandise from selling their products in interstate commerce to dealers who would otherwise purchase them and to place in the hands of the institute control over the business practices of manufacturers and distributors and the power to exclude from the industry those manufacturers and distributors who do not conform to the rules, regulations and definitions established" by the institute.

The commission said membership of the institute included approximately 135 individual copartnerships and corporations engaged in the wholesale distribution of dry goods, notions and kindred lines in the United States.

It named as officials of the organization Henry S. Sommers, of Sommers & Co., St. Paul, Minn., and Henry Matter and Jarrett H. Buys, of New York.

The commission said the institute compiled a list of manufacturers, giving the highest classification to those who confined their sales to wholesalers as defined by the institute, while in the lowest classification were placed manufacturers who sold to chain stores, syndicates and retail stores without maintaining any differential in price.

According to the complaint, the institute "coerced" manufacturers to confine their sales to institute members and wholesalers "under penalty of reclassification to a lower bracket" and "coerced and compelled its members to refrain from purchasing from manufacturers" who did not confine their sales to wholesalers as defined by the institute.
